CHAPTER XXI.

REPARATION.

Addressing Lord Lyttleton:—

"Her ladyship has no doubt related to you the history of her life?" said George Gladwin.

"From the earliest point that she could remember," responded his lordship.

And he spoke these words very hastily, and in a way, as he hoped, to prevent any repetition of that history before his cousin, whose ridicule he greatly dreaded. George understood him and smiled. Then Gladwin proceeded to detail his own history, of which we shall repeat only that portion with which the reader has not yet been made acquainted. Wilbraham Moyston, the schoolmaster, that worthy man who had under such strange circumstances adopted George, acted always to him as the best of fathers. Having given his adopted son an excellent education, George, at his own earnest wish, became a medical student, the good schoolmaster, to accomplish that wish, being compelled to deny himself all except those things which were absolutely necessary to his existence. But how great the sacrifice made for him George Gladwin was not allowed to know, until a time arrived when it was no longer possible to guard the secret. Taking leave of his benefactor, Gladwin came to London to pursue his studies and fit himself for the medical profession. Hearing and reading so much of the great actress, his old instincts and remembrance of his "show" life caused him one evening to visit the theatre, to see what the reigning star was like. Notwithstanding the many years that had elapsed, instantly and to his unbounded astonishment he recognized that Miss Lucinda Mordaunt was she who had been his companion in Silas Sloper's booth. On the following day he wrote to her, and on the next one of Lucy's domestics arrived to conduct him to her. How much each had to say to the other we may readily imagine.

Lucy delicately proffered assistance to Gladwin, which he felt it his duty gratefully, respectfully to decline. George had promised to return, but week after week passed and the actress saw him not again. She wondered, but could not imagine whereiore he came no more. The cause was that George had fallen seriously ill. The little money he had possessed under such circumstances soon went, and when again convalescent he found himself reduced to complete poverty. Nor was that the worst, for during his illness three letters had arrived from good old Wilbraham Moyston, who, now an extremely old man, had received warning that his life was about to close. The last of the letters, containing a very few and almost unintelligible words, expressed astonishment that the former epistles had, in no way, been answered, and bade George delay not an hour longer in returning, if he desired once again to behold in life the man who had been to him more than a father. What were George Gladwin's feelings will, without difficulty, be understood. Weak and ill, as still he was, George instantly left London and reached the bedside of his benefactor to find him on the very brink of the grave. He explained the reason that he had no sooner arrived; the good old schoolmaster smiled upon him, blessed him and died. Desiring to place a tablet on the grave of the deceased, which should tell of Wilbraham Moyston's many virtues to all posterity, and be a perpetual record of his own gratitude, George Gladwin forgot his pride, and, being himself by this time utterly penniless, wrote to Lucy, entreating that, as a loan, she would furnish him with the means to erect a tombstone to the memory of his noble-hearted benefactor. A fortnight passed and no word from Lucy. George was grievously hurt and disappointed, and full of agony for him was the thought that he must leave the old man in his obscure grave, with nothing to mark the spot where the best of human kind lay in his last long sleep. But then came the so greatly desired, and at last unhoped for letter from the actress. George hurried to the village churchyard and saw above his benefactor's grave a chaste and costly monument, and on it engraven words which eloquently told how good a man lay mouldering beneath.

And in Lucy's letter her former companion was desired, on his return to London, to call upon a certain person whom she named and whose address she gave. Of course Gladwin obeyed and learned with indescribable emotion that Lucy had purchased for him quite a lucrative practice, which, it may be said, the great skill he had acquired by close and earnest study of his profession enabled him soon considerably to increase. It was Lucy's letter to him on these subjects which George had shown to Lord Lyttleton; and it was his epistle to the actress, pouring out his thanks and gratitude for her great goodness, that had excited his lordship's jealousy. Both his lordship and the viscount were profoundly affected by that little history. The reckless manner of the viscount left him entirely, and Lord Lyttleton was unable to restrain his tears, as he murmured fondly:—

"My darling Lucy, my generous hearted wife—shame on me that I have dared to suspect you."

"Certainly I blush for myself," cried Greville Lyttleton; "it is frightful, and we are a couple of wretches."

The two noblemen warmly shook hands with the man whom a little before they had desired to see exterminated.

"I shall know, however, how to obtain pardon from my wife—and from you also, Mr. Gladwin," said Lord Lyttleton.

"How? In what way will you ——" commenced George, and was interrupted by his lordship——

"You will see! Silence! Silence!"

That last word was uttered by Lord Lyttleton because he just then saw that the terrace had become crowded with promenaders, many of whom were strolling into the large room in which the foregoing conversation had occurred. The Honorable Fred. Fortescue and Captain Beauchamp approached his lordship, and the first named said to him:—

"We have just heard of your intended departure."

Speaking loudly and distinctly, his lordship said:—

"I am glad, gentlemen, that you are here; you will have an opportunity to salute her ladyship, who is about to pass this way to her carriage."

"Her ladyship," quietly laughed Fortescue, and slyly nudging the viscount.

"Fortescue, my good fellow," Greville whispered to the right honorable, "it is very clearly proved——"

"What has been clearly proved?" asked Fortescue, still laughing.

"That I have been making a fool of myself," returned Greville, with a grave and serious manner.

Lucy appeared upon the terrace.

"Here is my cousin," exclaimed the viscount.

And observing the astonished looks of Beauchamp and Fortescue:—

"My cousin, gentlemen," he repeated to them pointedly and emphatically.

Not only those two gentlemen, but every one then present, ladies and gentlemen, showed signs of being considerably surprised. Greville hastened to Lucy and led her to Lord Lyttleton, who quietly, yet warmly and gratefully, pressed his cousin's hand. The ladies who had been seated rose as Lucy advanced into the room, and, with the gentlemen, saluted her with great deference and respect. Speaking so that all might plainly hear, Lord Lyttleton said:—

"Mr. Fortescue, we have received your lady's gracious invitation—Lady Lyttleton," he proceeded, looking towards Lucy, as he held her hand; "Lady Lyttleton hopes that in return Lady Fortescue will honor her by being present at an entertainment which a week hence she will give at Lyttleton Castle."

"At Lyttleton Castle?" exclaimed Lucy, in amazement.

"Yes, at Lyttleton Castle, whither I am about to have the honor to conduct you."

Lucy sank into a chair, weeping tears of joy, and murmuring to herself:—

"Oh, heaven! is it possible?"

"If your ladyship will permit me," the viscount said to her, "I will caracole at the window of your carriage; I vow to ride bareheaded the whole journey, and that I will not drink a drop of champagne, not even to your health and felicity."

Lucy smilingly gave him her hand, and he respectfully pressed it to his lips. Then Lucy whispered to her husband, anxiously and fearfully:—

"But—Henry—your mother——"

And with deep love his lordship responded:—

"To-morrow you shall embrace her."

Lucy uttered a stifled cry, almost overpowered with such great happiness. At that moment two domestics in livery appeared upon the terrace, preceding an elderly and stately lady, who walked slowly and proudly, followed by two other liveried servants. She advanced to the principal door of the room, and, pausing on its threshold, gazed haughtily about her.

"My aunt!" exclaimed Greville.

He hastened towards her; with a gesture she commanded him to be silent, and he inclined respectfully. His lordship, who had been addressing the gentlemen around him, had no idea that the dowager duchess of Lyttleton was so near him.

"You will not forget then, gentlemen," he said in conclusion, "her ladyship will expect you at Lyttleton Castle."

"At Lyttleton Castle," repeated with contempt the duchess, as she slowly advanced to the centre of the apartment.

"My mother!" cried Lord Lyttleton, and turned pale.

Lucy sprang from her seat, and stood with bowed head, trembling before her mother-in-law. The dowager duchess, having just glanced, and very haughtily and contemptuously at Lucy, said:—

"You may, in fact, my lord, conduct your wife to Lyttleton Castle—your mother has just quitted it."

Great, indeed, was the effect produced, not only on his lordship and Lucy, but on all besides. The viscount, contriving to hide the emotion that he experienced, again bowed respectfully to the duchess and offered her his arm. She took it and walked away again, slowly and grandly as she had arrived, and followed by her servants. Lord Lyttleton, recovering from the stupor into which his mother's presence and words had thrown him, seized Lucy's hand, and hurried with her back to their own apartments in the hotel. So, for the present, we will leave them.

CHAPTER XXII.

ALL THE WORLD'S A STAGE.

Peter Colston, the husband of Lucy's sister, had thriven so well in business that he had been able to remove to a far larger establishment than the one of which we had already heard, and in quite a fashionable neighborhood. We are now about to find our way to that new establishment, but are still to be denied the pleasure of making Mr. Colston's acquaintance, for the highly respectable and accomplished bootmaker had fallen ill with excitement and of a cold caught during the removal. But we shall find Mrs. Colston in the shop, and that will do quite as well for us. Sophy, moving her eye over the book, suddenly exclaimed:—

"My goodness, Simmons, here is an order we have forgotten."

"What order is that, mum," asked Simmons, who was cutting out a pair of upper leathers.

"Why, those three pairs of white satin shoes?"

"For a wedding, weren't they?"

"Yes," said Mrs. Colston, looking at the order book, "and the marriage was on the third—and this is the fifth."

"They had better go all the same, mum," coolly remarked Simmons, and took from a shelf the satin shoes, wrapped up in paper.

"Yes, yes, let them go," cried Sophy.

The shoes were given to the shop boy, with instructions to deliver them, and his mistress said to him:—

"Bob, tell them that in the confusion and bother of our removal we mistook the date, more particularly as the three in the book looked just like a five."

"I know, mum," grinned Bob.

"Tell 'em, besides, that Mr. Colston is ill, and that has put us out more than enough."

"All right, mum. Am I to wait for the money?"

"No, no, certainly not, they are as safe as the bank."

"Mr. Colston is a little better this morning, isn't he, mum?" asked Simmons.

"Yes, thankye, Simmons, I think he is. He has caught a very bad cold, though, and the doctor says there is a good deal of fever about him."

"Mr. Colston is such an excitable man, mum?"

"Yes, Simmons, a good deal too excitable and too fond of spouting at clubs. That sort of thing is no good to anybody, and it interferes with business and gets men into bad habits, such as drinking and late hours."

"Yes, mum, that's quite right, but nobody can say that Mr. Colston neglects his business."

"But," Sophy thought to herself, "he neglects his wife, and that's a great deal worse."

"If Mr. Colston hadn't looked after the main chance," pursued Simmons, "he would not have been able to leave that little shop for this big one."

"Ah, that may be, Simmons," but it's best to let well alone, I think, and we got on nicely in that little shop—better, I am afraid, than we shall ever do in this big one."

A little pinched-up man entered the shop; his once somewhat too showy attire worn into a very threadbare and seedy condition. He walked in anything but a sprightly manner up to the counter behind which was Mrs. Colston.

"What can I have the pleasure of doing for you, sir?" inquired that lady, and then, recognising him, exclaimed:—

"Bless me! surely I can't be mistaken."

"Mrs. Colston, I declare," said the gentleman.

"I was sure it was you," cried Sophy, "Mr.——, I can't just think of your name—but——"

"Skipjak—Alphonso Skipjak," said that gentleman.

"Yes, yes, that's it—you are a dancer at the playhouse; I know, I saw you that night when I was behind the scenes at——"

"Yes," dolefully sighed Skipjack, "I have had reason to keep that night in my memory."

"How is that?"

"Because I have kept my bed almost every day and night since."

"Dear me! you don't say so, and whatever has been the matter with you?"

"Rheumatism, Mrs. Colston."

"Poor young man!"

"I have got it in every bone of my body, and there I shall have to keep it, I am afraid."

"Sit down," said Sophy, pointing to one of the chairs before the counter.

Alphonso, with a few groans and contortions, contrived to seat himself.

"Wherever did you get all that rheumatism?" asked Mrs. Colston.

"I got it on Waterloo Bridge," replied Shipjak, groaning and rubbing his legs.

"On Waterloo Bridge?"

"Yes, on the night of which you were speaking I stood for three hours just inside the toll-gate, on the Middlesex side."

"For three hours?"

"Yes, and the weather was eleven degrees below freezing point."

"And gracious! what were you doing there?"

"I was waiting for my perfidious pupil."

"What pupil?"

"You know her. She was Miss Lucinda Mordaunt's waiting-maid."

"Oh! yes; I remember now, she who always called me young woman, very good looking, but very——"

"Very brazen—yes, that's her."

"Well?"

"Well, you will hardly believe it, but while I was waiting for her on Waterloo Bridge she was galloping away on the road to Moscow."

"She has been to Moscow?"

"Not only been but she has returned, and, without reckoning the boyard, has already completely cleaned out two noble marquises, a young duke and an old baronet."

"And were all these great people in love with her?"

"Not the least bit in the world. The adventure with the Russian baron made her the rage; she has neither great beauty nor great talent, but she is the fashion, and for a man to ruin himself for her is considered quite the thing, and creates a tremendous sensation."

"Well and good; I have no objection," said Mrs. Colston, tossing her head and shrugging her shoulders.

Then, while busying herself with little matters behind the counter, a thought occurred to her.

"If your rheumatism is so very bad, Mr. Skipjak, you are no longer able to dance and jump about."

"No, Mrs. Colston. I am frozen within."

"Poor young man."

"And I am waiting——"

"For what?"

"Till I can get thawed, Mrs. Colston."

And again Skipjak groaned and rubbed his poor legs. Sophy laughed, and then said:—

"And while you are awaiting for the thaw how do you contrive to live?"

"I give lessons; see," said Skipjak, bringing his kit from his pocket, "I always carry it about with me—so, if amongst your acquaintance—or if you should hear of any of your customers in want of a dancing-master, I shall feel much obliged if you will think of me."

"That you may depend upon, Mr. Skipjak; if I should happen to hear of anybody——"

"And with respect to my means of living, Mrs. Colston, I walk a good deal—that is to say I bobble about, and sometimes I meet with one or other of my old friends, who asks me to dine with him."

"Sometimes is not always," said Sophy.

"No, I wish it was," sighed Alphonso.

"Very well then, Mr. Skipjak; when you haven't happened to meet anybody just remember, will you, that we dine here every day at two o'clock."

"Thank you—thank you, Mrs. Colston," said Alphonso, rising from his chair as quickly as was possible to him, "I am very much obliged to you for your kindness to me."

"Nonsense—nonsense, Mr. Skipjak, not worth talking about."

"Ah! things are sadly changed with me through this contounded rheumatism, and it would have been a good job for me if Waterloo Bridge had never been built."

"Any other bridge would have done just as well," laughed Sophy.

"Well, I don't know about that. And to confess the truth to you, Mrs. Colston, I never knew till lately on how little it was possible for a man to exist. And sometimes I am very badly treated by those whom, I had flattered myself, would do anything to serve me."

"Ah, that's always the way, Mr. Skipjak."

"Yes, I believe it. Two months ago, it was in July, I was shamefully used. A professor that I had been very intimate with, and for whom I had done several good turns, invited me to dine with him at a public house——"

"Well?"

"Well—of course I went, and we had a capital dinner, and after it my kind friend slipped off and left me to pay the reckoning."

"Shameful!"

"When I say pay, I didn't—because I couldn't, so the landlord was going to send for a policeman and have me locked up, but contented himself at last with bundling me out of the house, and down I fell, with my nose in the gutter."

"Poor fellow!"

"And the other day another intimate friend invited me to dine with him, and when I knocked at his door the servant told me that he had gone into the country, and wouldn't be back for three weeks."

Sophy looked on the poor rheumatic ballet dancer with great compassion, and timidly said:—

"Mr. Skipjak, tell me, please—don't stand on any ceremony—is—does this happen to be a day when the gentleman who has invited you to dinner is not at home?"

"No, thank you," replied Alphonso, with much emotion, "but you are a generous creature, and I shall never, never forget it. And if ever I should get rid of my rheumatism and attain to that position in my profession to which my talents entitle me——"

"But, tell me, Mr. Skipjak," interrupted Sophy, "was it quite by accident that you came to our shop?"

"Certainly, it was—I took the first bootmaker's I came to—I am forced now," said the dancer, with a heavy sigh, "to wear mended boots and shoes—and so I came to have a patch put on this pump."

He unwrapped a shoe, saying:—

"This pump, Mrs. Colston, has danced before the queen and all the nobility."

Then he tried to cut six and groaned and rubbed his legs.

"It won't do—the thaw hasn't come yet—would you be so good, Mrs. Colston?"

He gave the shoe to Sophy, who placed it on a shelf behind her.

"Yes, yes," she said, "we will do that for you, Mr. Skipjak, though, as a rule, we don't mend, only make."

"There's a carriage, ma'am, has just stopped before our door," said Simmons.

"One of our aristocratic customers, I suppose," said Mrs. Colston, and looked into the street.

"No," she then added, "I don't know the livery."

"There is a lady getting out, though," said Simmons, "and she is coming here."

"And, my gracious!" exclaimed Sophy, "what a fine lady! Oh! isn't she dressed—my gracious!"

Alphonso Skipjak, who had been looking through the shop window, uttered a loud exclamation.

"What's the matter? is your rheumatism worse?"

"No, no—'tis she!"

"Who's she?"

"Anna Fubbs—oh! the thaw must have come now, for my legs are melting away under me."

Down he flopped into a seat near the door, and into the shop flounced the ci-devant waiting woman.

"Attend to me, my good woman, will you," said Anna, very grandly.

M'LLE BERTHA LIND,

Premiere Danseuse of M'me Lanner's Viennoise Ballet Troupe.

"Yes, 'tis she, no doubt about that," thought Sophy.

"I am not at all satisfied with my bootmaker, and am changing him; your establishment has been pointed out to me, and so I told my coachman to stop the carriage at your door. But really, my good woman, this is a very disagreeable neighborhood you live in. What a set of people there are about—my carriage can hardly get along without running over somebody at every step. Why do they allow so many of the common people about the streets; it dreadfully impedes the circulation."

"And this fine, affected lady was my sister's waiting woman," thought Sophy.

"My good woman, every individual in my establishment requires to be newly shod—men and women, coachmen, footmen, cooks and scullery maids—and housemaids, and—in short, everybody. As far as I am myself concerned I shall want a mere nothing; two or three dozen pairs of boots and shoes will be quite enough for me this side winter."

"In half an hour I will send a box of patterns to your house," said Sophy.

"Very well, that will do," languidly returned Miss Fubbs.

Sophy, handing a pen to Anna, said:—

"Perhaps, ma'am, you'll be good enough to give me your address?"

Miss Fubbs looked at the pen but did not attempt to take it, and seemed a little confused.

She was silent a few moments, and then said:—

"Write?—no, it is too troublesome——"

"Well, then, if you will tell me I can book your address."

"No—here—take this, my good woman."

And Miss Fubbs gave the envelope of a letter to Sophy. Then the fine lady, addressing Alphonso Skipjak, without looking towards him, drawled out:—

"Young man, call my footman."

Alphonso rose indignantly and placed himself before his former pupil. The lady's looks expressed her astonishment, and she saw with contemptuous pity how mean and poverty stricken was his appearance. Sophy, thinking that Skipjak would like to have a word or two with the lady to whom he was indebted for his rheumatism, found something for Simmons and his companions to do at the further end of the shop, and herself proceeded upstairs to see how Peter Colston was getting on.

And immediately Alphonso burst out with:—

"So, here you are, with a fine carriage and horses, and footmen—you, who a year ago felt honored when I condescended to notice you. People are right enough when they say that life is a game of see saw. You are up, and I, Anna——"

"You," laughed Anna, "are down, very much down. Formerly you dwelt in the garret, now you must occupy a cellar."

"And that makes you laugh? I wasn't far wrong when I told you that you would be ungrateful."

"I have never told you anything to the contrary," carelessly responded Miss Fubbs.

"For all that," bitterly exclaimed Skipjak, "I made you what you are."

"Rubbish, my dear man, I owe everything to myself alone. I understood well enough; it is not the danseuse who is in vogue, it is the woman!"

"That's true," cried Alphonso; "I have created only the danseuse, and the devil has made the woman. And he has made her rich too," he added, looking at Anna's diamonds.

"Rich? no," returned the lady, dolefully shaking her head; "I don't know how it happens, but, with me, money goes as it comes, and generally a little faster. It is quite incomprehensible, for I never waste any in bestowing charity and all that stuff."

"Much cause to complain, haven't you?" spitefully cried Alphonso; "why you have a fortune in your ears."

"These diamonds," hastily said Anna; "I must have others—ten times more brilliant—more brilliant especially than those of that insolent Lady Lyttleton, who, the other day, very nearly sent the pole of her carriage through the back of mine."

"How was that?"

"I was returning from a drive, when, on turning the corner of, I am sure I don't know what street, her carriage and mine were side by side; I desired to take precedence, and called out to my coachman:—'Break in the panels—upset—only get first.'"

"And he did get first, I suppose?"

"No! he broke the panels of my carriage, you understand; and the knave was awkward enough besides to receive a tremendous slash of the other coachman's whip—that is to say, the half of one—for I received the other half just under the eye. Ah! nobody would have dared to insult me in that way if my idiot of a coachmaker had put a coat of arms on my carriage."

"A coat of arms!" exclaimed the astonished Skipjak, "why where would he have been able to find it?"

"Oh, anywhere—that sort of thing is manufactured every day."

"Well, yes, that's true enough, I believe."

"And considering that I have been a little bit duchess, a little bit marchioness, a little bit baroness——"

"And pray, my lady," said Alphonso, with a mocking bow, "what may you happen to be a little bit of just now?"

"Just now I am a countess, my dear fellow—I had sworn to be revenged—and, within the last four days, vengeance has been mine."

"For that slash of the whip?"

"Precisely!"

"But how avenged?"

Miss Fubbs replied to that only with a very peculiar smile.

"Come, Alphonso," she presently proceeded, "I am a good creature after all; I should not have gone in search of you, certainly not!—but since I have found you on my road I will not leave you in the street."

"Won't you though!"

"Ah! I have an idea——"

"What a novelty!" thought Skipjak.

"If you like, I will attach you to my person."

"In what capacity?"

"As steward. You shall pay my tradespeople. You will have nothing to do."

"Oh! what a terrible humiliation," muttered Alphonso, groaning, and again rubbing his rheumatic legs."

"Well, what do you say?"

"That, of course, I accept your kind offer," returned Skipjak, with a bland and amiable smile.

Sophy returned to the shop, and by her directions Simmons placed the box of patterns in Miss Fubbs' carriage. And one of the lady's footmen took his place just outside the shop door in waiting for his mistress. He was a huge, broad-shouldered fellow, with immense calves and tremendous whiskers.

"You see that man?" Anna said to her former dancing master.

"I can see his whiskers," replied Alphonso.

"Well, he is the last of Baron Tcsikoff's peasants——"

"The last?"

"Yes, the only one that I haven't devoured."

"You must have found him very tough then?"

Miss Fubbs laughed.

"Come along, she said, "the carriage is waiting for us."

"You take me with you?"

"Yes, you shall ride——"

"Inside?"

"No."

"Behind!" indignantly exclaimed Skipjak; "on the footboard, with those enormous whiskers?"

"What can you take me for, Alphonso? Could I so use a man who formerly loved me?"

"Ah, now you talk something like!"

"You shall ride on the box—with the coachman."

Skipjak once more groaned and rubbed his legs.

"Good day, my good woman," Anna said grandly to Mrs. Colston, and sailed from the shop.

Her Russian footman, Monjikoff, held open and closed after her the door of the carriage, which still continued about a minute before the bootmaker's establishment, while Alphonso Skipjak was torturing his poor rheumatic frame in his efforts to reach the seat allotted to him beside the coachman. As the carriage rolled away, into the boot-shop toddled good old Andrew Wentworth.

CHAPTER XXIII.

AN UNEQUAL MATCH.

The old actor had arrived in time to see and recognize Miss Anna Fubbs as she stepped into her carriage.

"What are we all coming to, I wonder?" he muttered, as he deposited his umbrella in a corner of the shop. "Real ladies will grow ashamed of being seen in a carriage when girls of that sort go dashing about in such a style."

Sophy, as she saw him enter the shop, ran to Wentworth, and, shaking him heartily by the hand, said:—

"Oh gracious! how d'ye do, how glad I am—why it's quite an age since I saw you."

"I'll tell you how that is, Mrs. Colston; you see, Lucy would make me leave the stage, and certainly I was not at all sorry."

"I dare say not, Mr. Wentworth."

"No, it was quite time I gave it all up, for I had grown too old to be of service to any manager, and after my pupil had retired from the profession I couldn't bear the sight of a theatre."

"Poor old gentleman!"

"No, I couldn't; so I made up my mind to get out of the way of them all, and go and live quietly in the country."

"Oh!" said Sophy, "if you have been living out of town that of course accounts for——"

"Well," cried Wentworth, "where I am living is not exactly out of town, nor is it in the country—I remember though when it used to be—the fact is, Mrs. Colston, I am living out at Wandsworth."

"Oh, indeed!"

"That is, pretty near it. I have got a nice little cottage, and a nice little garden behind it, and a nice little bit of garden before it—yes and a tree as high as the house—higher I may say."

"And are you happy?"

"Yes, very happy—only I am very miserable."

"I can guess what about."

"For two whole months I have not seen——" commenced the old man—stopped—and sighed.

"Lucy, you mean, don't you?"

Wentworth sighed again.

"Do you no longer go to see her?" asked Sophy.

"I used to go at first—when her husband brought her back to town. And Lucy told me then all about her meeting with the Duchess of Lyttleton."

"Yes, her mother-in-law, who fled from her as if she had been the plague."

"Just so. So of course Lucy didn't go to the castle, but came back to live in a large mansion in London; too large a great deal, for nobody ever comes to it. And when I remember what a number of visitors she always used to have!"

Once more Wentworth sighed and dolefully shook his head.

"But she used to receive you, if no one else," said Sophy.

"Yes, just as formerly. But I never thought of calling her Lady Lyttleton, and her husband always looked queer when I said Lucy; and as I saw he didn't like it I told him it was very hard to get rid of old habits, particularly at my time of life. But wait a bit, says I—I'll leave off calling her Lucy, it shan't last much longer."

"And wasn't his lordship satisfied with that assurance?"

"Well, no, I suppose he thought it had lasted too long already, for one day I went to the house and I didn't see Lucy."

"How was that?"

"Because they didn't let me in."

"Lucy knew nothing of it, or else——"

"Lucy," vehemently cried the old man; "she send me from her door—I didn't suppose it for one moment. If the thought had but crossed my mind I—I would have walked away to the nearest bridge, and——"

"Well?"

"I would have thrown myself into the river."

"Oh, Mr. Wentworth!"

"And it wouldn't have been merely for the sake of producing an effect. No, no! I never had that ambition, even while I was an actor."

"Poor man," thought Mrs. Colston; "it is lucky for him he has had the thought to come to-day."

"I ought not to have been treated so though, ought I, Mrs. Colston?"

"No, indeed, Mr. Wentworth. But I should have been treated exactly as you were if I had given them the chance. Lord Lyttleton would have been ashamed of having a shoemaker's wife for a sister-in-law—precisely as formerly Mr. Colston would have forbidden me to go near my sister because she was an actress—prejudice, you know, thrusts itself in everywhere. I understood all that, and, instead of going to Lucy's house, to have the door slammed in my face, I wrote to her——"

"Wrote to her?"

"Yes, wrote to her."

"But why? about what?"

"Dear sister, I cannot climb high enough to reach you—if you love me still descend to me."

"You wrote that?"

"Yes."

"And what reply did she make?"

"None at all?"

"Dear me!"

"She descended."

"She has been here to—to see you?"

"She comes once a week, regularly."

"Once a week—what day?"

"Every Tuesday."

"Why, this—this is Tuesday——"

"Yes."

"At what hour does she——"

"One o'clock."

"At that rate she will presently be here?"

"I am expecting her now every minute."

Wentworth was in a state of great excitement.

"I shall see her again," he joyfully cried, "oh, my dear Lucy! I shall be able to embrace her, and 'tis to you I shall owe that happiness!"

He threw his arms around Mrs. Colston.

"For shame, Mr. Wentworth," she laughingly said.

"Oh, never mind," replied the good old man, "I have had time to save up a good deal of tenderness; my heart is full of it, so I can afford to give a little of it to you."

Again he would have hugged Sophy, but she, getting beyond his reach, said:—

"No, no, pray be quiet or you will ruin yourself."

The next instant:—

"Come this way," she cried, "I see my sister crossing the road."

She hastily led the way to the parlor behind the shop, which immediately Lucy entered and passed through. As she threw open the door of the parlor she started with glad surprise on beholding Andrew Wentworth there.

"My dear child," said the old man, his voice trembling with emotion.

"Dear father," exclaimed Lucy, "at last then I see you once again! I was believing that you had forgotten me."

"Forgotten you!" faltered Wentworth. "Ah! if you knew how glad I am to see you."

"Well, Sophy dear!"

Sophy was about to kiss her sister, but Wentworth gently pushed Mrs. Colston away and took her place.

"You horrid, jealous old man," smiled Sophy.

"Oh, but, you know, you see her every week, and 'tis two months since I—but, sit down, Lucy, sit down."

He placed a chair for her; thought then that it was not good enough, and looked about the room for a better.

And as soon as Lucy had seated herself:—

"But, dear me, look at that," he cried, "why, your feet must be quite damp: You must have walked here, and in such weather as this why didn't you come in your carriage?"

"I did," replied Lucy, "but I have left it at a little distance from the house."

"You will be sure to catch cold. What can I find to put under your feet?" said Wentworth, excitedly hunting about the room.

He saw a bandbox standing on the table.

"The very thing," he cried, about to place it beneath Lucy's feet.

"The very thing indeed," said Sophy, "why, my new bonnet is in it."

She made haste to remove the bandbox beyond Wentworth's reach, and placed a little footstool for her sister.

"Come and sit down beside me, pray do," said Lucy.

"It was me she told to sit there," said Wentworth, as Mrs. Colston sat down near Lucy.

Sophy laughed and resigned her chair to the old man, and, having procured another little, low chair for herself, sat down on the other side of her sister.

"Now," Wentworth said to Lucy, "let me have a good look at you—let me see if there is the old smile!"

Having gazed a moment earnestly into her face:—

"Gracious!" he exclaimed, "it seems to me that you are very pale; have you been ill?"

"No—no, father," hesitated Lucy.

"Then you have some grief or trouble; don't you think so, Mrs. Colston?"

Compelling herself to smile:—

"No, no, I assure you, commenced Lucy.

"I don't believe you," interrupted Wentworth.

He looked keenly into her face, and Lucy averted her head.

"There," cried the old man, "I was sure of it!—in former times you used to tell me everything. Now you think that I am no longer good for anything, don't you? your husband has been vexing you, perhaps making you fret; why don't you tell us?—there is such a consolation in confiding one's troubles to a sympathising friend."

Lucy burst into tears.

"You are right, father," she said. "The grief that we conceal and lock up within our own bosom gnaws, devours the heart; yes, I do suffer, I am very, very unhappy!"

"My poor, dear child," said Wentworth, his own eyes filling with tears.

"I will tell all to you, for you are my best and only friend!"

"Yes, do go on, my dear," urged the old man, holding and kissing Lucy's hand.

It was indeed a sad history which Lady Lyttleton had to relate. His lordship had courageously struggled against the prejudice by which his wife had been made to suffer, until that fatal hour when the Duchess of Lyttleton, his mother, had, before all, repulsed and disowned her plebeian daughter-in-law. From that time a kind of malediction had been upon them both, weighing upon their spirits and crushing all their joy.

An Ancient Game.

Morra, the Roman national game played under the reign of the Cæsars, and far older than the Colosseum, was brought from Greece. Cicero spoke of it in his De Divinatione. A Roman city prefect prohibited its practice in the Forum, where tradespeople were won to settle their bargains by it, and on the ruins of the temples of Thebes and on the tombs of Beni Hassan, in Upper Egypt, may be seen rude frescoes, illustrating the same and its various phases.

To the uninitiated it seems horribly stupid and pointless, but the natives delight in it, and will pass hours in a species of morra tournament, when the unsuccessful champions will treat their conquerors to wine and cigars, the usual stakes played for.

Two persons place themselves opposite to each other, their right hands closed. Simultaneously they extend them with some of the fingers opened, each calling out a number which he guesses will equal the sum of his own and his adversary's digits. If he be correct he scores one point towards the game, which is marked by the left hand held perpendicular in the air; should neither call out the right number they begin again, and go on jerking out spasmodically Due, Quattro, Tutti, the veins on their necks and foreheads bursting with excitement, and the perspiration standing in great beads upon their bronzed faces, until one or the other has scored up five, when he howls out with exultation, E Fatto! Ho Vinto! and slaps his two palms together, after which, unless it be an open contest free to all comers, they adjourn to a neighboring table and discuss the merits of the performance, with an admiring gallery, over a bottle of wine. So prevalent is this pastime among the natives that you see even the models on the steps and the beggars at the church doors engaged in it whenever their trade is a little slack, and there are fewer strangers than usual in the streets.

As a rule the game, although exciting, leading green forestiers sometimes to imagine that they are about to assist at some sanguinary drama, as they hear excited voices and half-choked exclamations, and see the wild gestures of two or three peasants, who, surrounded by a circle of silent spectators, seem to be upon the point of springing at each other's throats, does not cause any quarrels or bloodshed, for it is a characteristic of Italian, or rather Roman gatherings—the people indignantly reject the generic appellation that little drunkenness or quarreling is indulged in. Sometimes two Morra players will fall into a dispute and accuse each other of cheating, when knives are brought into requisition, and a scientific carving match ensues, until gendarmes interiere, but this seldom occurs with the peasantry, and is only a characteristic of the notoriously bad characters resident in the Transtevere quarters of the Roman city.

OUR PORTRAIT GALLERY.

M'LLE. BERTHA LIND.

This beautiful danseuse, whose portrait appears on this page, was born in Stockholm, Sweden, in April, 1852, and when quite a child her family removed to Vienna. Her parents were occasional frequenters of the opera and theatres and Bertha always accompanied them. On her visits to the opera her entire attention was engrossed in watching the movements of the ballet, and on her return home she imitated their movements so well that the attention of her parents was attracted, and at length they decided to allow her to follow the bent of her inclinations, and she was placed under the instruction of the best masters of the art. She was an apt pupil, and, her heart being in sympathy with her studies, she made rapid progress and attained a degree of excellence seldom found in one so young. She made her first appearance in public at the Royal Imperial Opera in Vienna in 1864, where the grace and skill of her movements, combined with her rare beauty, won at once the artistic sympathies of the audience, and from that night she became a favorite and her success was assured. Subsequently she attracted the attention of Mme. Katti Lanner, who immediately secured her for the troupe which bears her name. In conjunction with this troupe she has been over five years, and has appeared at the principal theatres and opera houses in Paris, Stockholm, Copenhagen, Berlin and other continental cities, everywhere achieving success and at once becoming a popular favorite with her audiences. She is now dancing at the Grand Opera House in this city, where she is very popular and shares with Mme. Lanner the applause that nightly greets their salutatory efforts.

EXPECTATIONS.—A poor young man once fell in love with an heiress, and the passion being returned, it only wanted the parents' consent to make them happy. At length, meeting the father, he asked for the daughter's hand. "How much money can you command?" asked the millionaire, grumly. "I cannot command much," was the reply. "What are your expectations?" "Well, to tell the truth, I expect to run away with your daughter, and marry her, if you don't give your consent."

A HARD STORY, OR SOFT IRON.—A Chicago paper responsible for the story that a few days since some boys in that city dropped an anvil weighing five pounds on the head of an African who was passing, and he had them arrested. He said he was willing to let the boys have fun, but when they jammed a "gentleman" hat down over his eyes and spoiled it in that way, the law must take its course.

To Correspondents.

JOHN M., Boston.—1. No. 2. Jem Mace beat Slack, Thorpe, Posh Price, Travers, Brettle, Hurst, King, Goss (twice), and Tom Allen; was beaten by Brettle and King, and fought a draw with Goss. 3. Billy Edwards never fought any one but Sam Collyer, winning both battles. 4. Collyer beat Carr, Bolster, Barney Aaron, Johnny McGlade, Billy Kelly and Johnny Lafferty; was beaten by Aaron and Edwards (twice). 5. Delehanty, Dengler and Bloodgood's troupe were in Portland, Me., Sept. 2d and 3d.

BOOBY, New Orleans.—1. We give a decided preference to breech loaders over muzzle loaders. 2. It will last fully as long. 3. Such a thing cannot occur with a first class gun of the kind. 4. Parker Brothers', of Meckman street, New York, we consider the best now in use. 5. If the dealer exposes a card in dealing, his opponents, provided neither of them have touched their cards, may claim a new deal, but the deal is not lost.

A YORK SUBSCRIBER.—Two strikes having been called on the batsman, the umpire calls a foul strike. Is the foul strike counted against the batsman, or, if not, what becomes of the batsman's and the men on bases—the bases all being full?..... The foul strike does not count as one of three called strikes, and in case of a foul strike, players' return to bases left and cannot be put out. The foul strike counts one of three such strikes only.

J. B. MCKINLAY.—No man can be substituted for a player in the game, unless by reason of illness or injury, after the commencement of the third inning; and any player leaving the field without the consent of both captains must be given out whenever his turn at the bat comes, and he is not on hand to strike when the umpire calls for the striker. Read the rules and get posted.

J. DUNROE.—There is no rule governing the point as stated, but had the non-striker's ball been off the table along with the red, it being a carom game, the red would have had to have been spotted in the centre spot, and the striker a chance to count. It is customary to use three instead of two balls on the table, consequently the pocketed red should have remained off.

HOWITZ, Boston, Mass.—1. Not likely, as the challenger has not taken the proper method to secure a match. 2. We say, No. We are not aware of the existence of such an organization. Perhaps John Maguire, who can be found next door to the Howard Athenæum, can post you.

SPORT.—1. Captain Barclay was not a pugilist. 2. Peter Morris beat Baylis, Dymock, Rafferty, Hartley (twice), Geo. Holden, Roberts and Fox, and fought draws with Holden and Harry Taylor. 3. Price fought a draw with Joe Coburn and defeated Australian Lilly.

J. AND W.—They did not agree upon any number of innings, as they had no right to do so. Not agreeing upon a tie the game had to be played to a finish, a majority of runs at the end of the tenth, or the eleventh would not have been played.

W. FRANCISCO, Lowell, Mass.—There are two Slossens, both boys; one is a counterfeit; the genuine is in this city. The counterfeit can probably be traced from you. 2. No. 3. It is not absolutely necessary for an actor singer to read music for the purpose you mention.

T. C. SANFORD, Philada.—You had better send in your claim to the testimonial committee through Mr. McGonigle, of Booth's Theatre. The members of that committee are the proper persons to receive your claim.

T. Cool Burgess received $250 per week—the highest salary ever paid any European performer—but it was for a very brief season, and several managers wanting his services at the same time, which was the cause.

H. D. J., Troy, N. Y.—When the cue ball is "frozen" to another a player can count by playing away from said contact ball and the object ball on it and another, irrespective of which of the two is first hit.

FOR THE STORE.—The Red Stockings declined to enter the championship arena as candidates for the whip pennant. The convention had nothing to do with the championship. They do not recognize the title in the national association.

LARKVILLE.—1. A had no right to use his money down, but must bet as much as B has got, viz., $300, and the hands would then stand as B was a loser hand, for the player held six cards. Your Boston question stands over till next week.

T. G. H., Elyria, O.—1. The rules under which cricket is played in the United States in the Clubs of Hoboken, Philadelphia, Longford, England, are identical. 2. If a ball is neither thrown nor jerked it is a fair ball, regardless of style of delivery.

NASHVILLE.—1. A had no right to draw his money back, but must have the $250, the amount of B's pile. 2. Your hand is foul, having six cards. The fact of one of them being a black card is immaterial.

A LEO, Philadelphia.—1. If the trump had not been turned, a card might be drawn, or added, as the case may be, which you have failed to state. 2. The Theatre Comique is on Broadway opposite the St. Nicholas Hotel.

W. R. MINERS, Racine, Wis.—The Actives refusing to play forfeited the game to the Invincibles. Had the umpire "called" the game in the first part of the 9th innings the victory would have been decided by the seven eight innings played.

PEARCE THOMPSON, Utica.—The regular games of a tour—as far as balls are concerned—are those advertised to be played when they start. As the game in question was not one of the tour series, but an extra, it ought not to be counted as one of the games bet on.

J. Brown, Janesville, Wis.—The game being agreed upon and the contestants being on the field and ready to play, the party refusing to play forfeits the game, 9 to 0.

T. A., Tecumseh, Mich.—A blank three cannot be held in a hand of mock cribbage, and ten points were all that your opponent was entitled to. You were right in both cases.

R. F. E.—At the American four-ball game at billiards the white ball is not spotted after going off the table, but is held until the player's next turn at the cue.

REED, CONN, Rockford.—1. 2 outs and 5 runs. The most runs is generally considered as the best score, but this score is no criterion of batting. 2 runs with 3 1st base hits.

WINFIELD.—Beadle's book for 1870 does not say in the rules that the ball shall be delivered "fairly for the striker." It was struck out of the books last season.

LONE STAR, New Orleans.—Get a book and study the rules. If a fair strike the person of a player outside the lines it is foul, and caught in the bound it is out, no matter where the ball strikes afterwards.

DR. LOUIS READER.—For plays in the Olympic nine under the name of "Hally." We did not receive your previous communication.

J. C., Bay City.—1. Herod's fastest mile time was 1:43½; Judge Curtis', 1:43¾. 2. Your statement is so utterly mixed that we have tried in vain to ascertain what you mean.

W. W.—1. The salary of a good harlequin ranges from $40 to $60 per week. 2. Five years ago such a question should answer the purpose if you have any talent for that line.

ROBERT M.—1. P. T. Barnum never managed the Winter Garden theatre. Charles Abbott is considered a better clown than the person you mention.

ROSE.—Both are good artists and naturally could be compared, as their lines of business are dissimilar. The character you select is not a fair one for the ambition of either.

J. C. S.—Can't refer you to any school; but if you call upon Prof. Wm. Clark, 80 West Houston street, you can obtain lessons in box-ing.

T. PERPIGNORE, South Boston.—1. About 48 years. He is in Europe. 2. Billy Emerson does all his acts in a black face. 3. Apply at John Maguire's agency, Howard street, Boston.

J. C., Toronto, Canada.—William Davidge, Sr., is engaged the coming season at the Olympic, Brooklyn. His son played a part of the last season at the Grand Opera House.

NIBLO, San Francisco, Cal.—Edwin Booth did play "Hamlet" 100 nights, and the run of the play was temporarily interrupted by the occurrence referred to.

H. A. B. W., Phila.—1. Fifty dollars for cut and biography. 2. Three lines in amusement column, cash in advance, will cost $17.58 for one year.

OZRO. W. HUFF, Pithole City.—The population of London, Eng., is about three millions and a quarter, and that of Pekin, China, is estimated at about two millions.

BOB, Akron, O.—The man is a fraud; he has never been on a fishing excursion with us; in fact we don't go on such trips—it's Horace Greeley who "goes a fishing." Give the party a wide berth.

SUSQUEHANNA, Grovise Coal Mines.—The trump card having been carried, the deal must stand. It should have discovered that he was entitled to the deal in time.

BLAZE, Richfield Springs.—The judges had no right to declare all bets off. Rockingham, having been withdrawn after winning two heats, his backers loose their money.

RAY BAKER, New Orleans, La.—The excursion money in the Al. McCoole fight was divided, but the stake money remains in the hands of the stakeholder.

R. B. A. AND MCG.—"S. B. A. bets McG. $25 that 1:42 was never beaten in a mile running race. Who wins?" S. B. A. wins; the fastest time is 1:41¾.

"ON THE DOORSTEP" is not equal to your previous efforts and is therefore declined.

THE TURF AND THE PRESS.

While the Saratoga and Jerome Park race meetings were in progress the Sun, in its reports, went out of the beaten track of turf reporters, and made up its articles in the sensational style, pitching into judges, starters, and others in a very free and easy manner, creating a flutter of alarm and excitement among the parties most directly concerned, and conveying the impression that there was a screw loose somewhere, and that the races were not all on the square. This bold attack upon men who have always been accustomed to have things pretty much their own way, naturally incensed them; but instead of giving the proprietor of the Sun an opportunity to prove its charges, or acknowledge their falsity, in a legal manner, they have addressed a note to the executive committee of the Saratoga Racing Association, requesting them "to take the necessary steps to prevent a recurrence of a similar outrage in the future by withdrawing from the reporter of the Sun any access to the reporters' stand." We are also informed that the American Jockey Club intend taking decisive measures with respect to what they term the wilful misrepresentations of the same journal respecting the racing at Jerome Park. Now, we trust that, for the honor of the turf, as well as to vindicate the good name of the turfmen of America, some thing more be done by these committees than the mere shutting out of a reporter who but obeys the instructions of his employer. If the charges were all false and merely concocted to injure certain members of the turf, let a proper investigation be made and the truth be published. If, on the other hand, the Sun has not misrepresented the facts, but has had tangible evidence of dishonesty in the conduct of those race meetings, let the truth be told boldly, no matter what turfmen or turf interests may be made to suffer thereby. This thing should not be permitted to end with the mere dismissal of a press representative from the reporters' stand. Our own reporter, in referring to the late trotting meeting at Buffalo, informs us that Harry Harley, a horse owned in Buffalo, was the favorite for the $20,000 purse, and in the first heat he overpowered his driver, ran away, collided and upset his sulky, Prince winning the heat; yet the judges, instead of distancing Harry Harley, declared that it was no heat although the rule expressly says that "if the accident resulted in whole or in part from any carelessness or neglect, or any close chance taken by the driver, such horse shall be distanced." Harry Harley, by the kindness of the judges, was allowed to start again, and the first prize, of $20,000, was kept in Buffalo, to which a majority of the judges, we are told, belong. Other instances are given of wrongs perpetrated at these meetings, and it is the duty of all right minded and honest turfmen to have these charges examined into, that the truth may be ascertained and published to the world. There is an old adage which says that "where there is so much smoke there must be some fire." As the late lamented Mr. Gradgrind said:—"What we want is facts." If turf interests have been wronged by wilful misrepresentations of newspapers, let us have the facts; if the newspaper reports were intended to correct an evil by exposing fraud and double dealing, such reports being based on well-grounded information, let the rights of the press be vindicated, and convince evil-doers that the dismissal of a reporter cannot deter that press from doing its duty to the public. There should be plenty of work for our new turf association this fall in the investigation of the several charges of corruption in connection with our race meetings.

THAT INTERNATIONAL FOOT RACE, of the progress of which we made mention in our two previous issues, was brought to a somewhat abrupt termination on Friday, September 2d, by Lewy Nap "throwing up the sponge" in token of defeat, his physical and mental prostration being so great as to prevent his going farther than Sedan, on the river Meuse. Billy King, of Prussia, although terribly cut up by the rough roads he passed over, making him a trifle foot-sore, possessed such extraordinary stamina that he was still in a condition to run for a nation's life when "the other man" resigned the contest. The balance of the course will only be a "walk over" for the German stag, whose powers of locomotion proclaim him to be the "champion of Europe." When the French back-action escapement race gave up dead beat, his magnanimous foes, pitying his weak and debilitated condition, vied with each other in providing him with "Sedan cheers."

SONS OF CAMBRIA.—This society will hold a pic-nic at Myrtle Avenue Park, Brooklyn, E. D., on Thursday, Sept. 8th, the object being for the purpose of promoting good fellowship and enjoyment, the re-union of the sons of Cambria, and social intercourse. Music is to be furnished by Conner's Fourteenth Regimental Band, a harpist, and the Gwalia Glee Club. We acknowledge, with thanks, the receipt of an invitation to join in the recreations of the day.

A LIVELY POLITICAL CAMPAIGN is looked for in this city this fall, the Young Democracy threatening to enter the field in competition with old Tammany. We are under the impression that the war between Prussia and France is likely to exert a certain influence on political parties, an unfriendly feeling between the Irish and German elements having been generated through "sympathy" for the two belligerent nations now at war.

THOSE RED FACED, wild-looking creatures who have made their appearance on Broadway are neither Indians nor Arabs, as might be inferred from their ensemble, but are bona fide New Yorkers, just returned from a "season of pleasure" at the seaside and other summer resorts. "Our Jim," understanding that they intend to remain with us a while, calls them "black and tan tarry-ers."

"OUR JIM" astonished us, the other day, by asking whether Brainard, the well known pitcher of the Red Stockings, had ears of extraordinary size. We assured him that Mr. B. had ears of elegant contour and size, and then inquired why he had thought differently. "Vy," he rejoined, "Asa is a little pitcher, and Ive allus hearn as how 'little pitchers has long years!"

THE FRENCH AND PRUSSIAN WAR.—"Our Jim," who has been reading the details of the battles fought on the 18th of Aug., at Gravelotte, says the place is well named, for where there was such slaughter and burying of the dead, it must surely be a grave lot, and he thinks that the vanquished must have likewise been a grave lot at the close of the fight.

USELESS INVENTION.—A German machinist has manufactured a speaking machine, which is said to pronounce the alphabet distinctly, and also sings and laughs. The present generation is in no need of such an invention, for the female sex furnish more talking and laughing machines than we can well tolerate.

OUR FRIEND JINKS has got a new baby, of which he is unnecessarily proud. The other day he was holding it up over his head, admiring the cholicky, noisy youngster, when a bystander sarcastically remarked:—"That's a valuable infant." "Yes," replied Jinks, who swallowed it all, "he is certainly above par."

"JUST IN SEASON.—An English architect has perfected a plan for an immense mausoleum, of sufficient capacity to contain 2,000,000 bodies. It might be erected on the seat of war between France and Prussia, where a fine opportunity is offered to test its holding capacity.

INSANE.—Among the cable dispatches sent to this country from Paris on Sept. 2d was one to the effect that the King of Prussia was insane. A little premature, perhaps; but it is generally conceded that the King will be en Seine before long.

AN EASY JOB.—We are told that Meissonvier, the painter, is to receive $20,000 to illustrate the victories achieved by the French during the present campaign. The subjects being very scarce, the painter is not likely to have much to do.

STILL AHEAD.—Rhode Island boasts of having nine pin factories which turn out about six million pins a day. New York has ten-pin factories, so that we are still ahead. Set 'em up again.

SOUND SPORT:—Steamboat racing on the waters of Long Island.

GIRARD VS. POTTSVILLE.—These cricket clubs, the former of Philadelphia and the latter of Pottsville, played a match on Aug. 18th. At the latter place, the Girard winning by the close score of 97 to 96.

ATLANTICS vs. RED STOCKINGS.

A BAD DEFEAT FOR THE BROOKLYN CLUB.

SPECIAL REPORT TO THE CLIPPER.

The return game between the Atlantics and their great western rivals was played in Cincinnati on Friday last, Sept. 2. The day was a beautiful, breezy one, and an immense crowd assembled, numbering probably ten thousand. The Cincinnatis were weak in the loss of Geo. Wright, who is still on crutches, while Zettlein, the pitcher of the Atlantics, had had an attack of ague, contracted in Chicago, and the nine generally complained of toilet used up from their long travel. Under these circumstances a tip-top game, such as the Brooklyn one, was hardly looked for. The grounds were improved by the addition of a paling fence, to keep the crowd back from the field; a fine idea, and one which might advantageously be copied elsewhere. Mr. Booth, of the Eagles, of Louisville, was selected for umpire, and the Cincinnatis having won the toss, and sent their visitors to the bat, the game commenced a few minutes after three o'clock. Just before this, the Reds fell into line, and Mr. A. B. Champion, the ex-president of the club, on behalf of the ladies of the city, presented the nine with a beautiful streamer, with a monogram, and the words "Red Stockings," running down its length. A dead ball was selected.

THE GAME.

First Innings—Pearce, who opened the ball, gave Deas in left field a chance for a catch, and retired. Smith had a life through a low throw by Waterman of his grounder, and a passed ball gave him second. Start hit to Sweasy, who did not handle it very promptly, but Joe was out at first in the umpire's opinion, Smith in the meantime reaching third; Chapman, after hitting a couple of fouls, was handsomely retired out at first by Waterman, Smith being left, and a whitewash being the result..... McVey was given first on called balls, and a passed ball gave him the next two bags. Gould flew out to Chapman, McVey getting home on the return of the ball. Waterman earned two bases by a beautiful corker to left, which Chapman fielded well. Chap. also gobbled in Allison's fly, and Harry Wright closed the innings by a little fly to Smith, Waterman being left, with one run scored.

Ferguson obtained a life by a missed fly on H. Wright's part during a hard run, and then second by an overthrow to second. Zettlein sent Fergy to 3d by a grounder to Gould, himself suffering at first. Hall reached first through a muffed grounder by Waterman, but was left there, as Pike and Mcdonald favored McVey and Gould with fly catches in succession. One run..... Leonard was splendidly taken on the fly by Hall, running hard. Brainard, who followed, struck out. Sweasy hit a good grounder to left, earning one base, and getting second on Chapman's slow handling. He there scored on a wild throw by Smith on Dean's grounder, the latter reaching third. McVey sent him home by a safe drive to left field, but was left on first by Hall's elegant catch of Gould's high fly to right centre. Two runs, and the score 3 to 1 in favor of the Reds.

2. Pearce, who seemed to be batting skyward, was fled by Sweasy; Smith's fly was muffed by Sweasy, running out into centre field; Start earned his base by a drive to right, Smith getting to third, where he was left by a nice doubling up exhibition, Leonard to Brainard; Chapman's grounder to Sweasy, who threw out at second, and the latter giving it to Gould in ample time, the Atlantics thus getting their second cast of Chicago paint..... Waterman favored Smith with a bounder and suffered at first in consequence; Allison got a base on a grounder over second, and was around to third on an ill judged throw of Zettlein's to Start; H. Wright was called to first; Leonard gave Fergy a foul fly catch; Brainard sent Allison home and H. Wright to third on a grounded hit to right; Sweasy also hit safe, Wright scoring. Brainard and Sweasy were both left, however, by a magnificent one handed catch, by Chapman, of Dean's long fly. Two runs. Score, 5 to 1.

3. Ferguson suffered at first by Leonard's fielding. Zettlein was given his base on called balls, as was also Hall, the umpire keeping strictly to the rules. Pike was captured on the fly by McVey. No run was made by the Yorkers, as Zettlein was fielded out at third by Leonard, where McDonald were also modest players. Grounder, Whitewash number three..... McVey hit safely a soft fly just over Pearce—one of Dickey's own. Gould followed by a fly to short centre, on which he reached second, and McVey to third. Waterman tried for a home run on a heavy crack over Hall, but was caught at the home plate by Hall and Pike's throws, the innings thus closing for two runs and a final score of 14 to 5. The Atlantics did not bat up to their average standard, not a player making two bases on a hit. Their out-fielding was splendid and the in-fielding very fair, though several of the players, Ferguson and Zettlein in particular, seemed used up. The "Charmer's" balls lacked their wonted steam. The Reds played an elegant game all through. The score was as follows:—

STAR vs CHAMPION.

There was a fair assemblage of spectators upon the Capitoline grounds, Brooklyn, on the afternoon of Saturday, Sept. 3d, when the return game for the amateur championship was played between the Stars, of the City of Churches, and the Champions, of Jersey City. The score, we regret to have to say, is all that we can make room for:—

ANOTHER FATAL END TO A BASE BALL MATCH.—It is not often that a game of ball has a fatal termination, but one played at Sharpsburg, Pa., on the 27th ult. resulted in the death of one of the players of the losing nine, the opposing nine. The victim was a youth about eighteen years of age, named John Rogers, and his assailant was also a youth of about the same age, named Thomas Davis. Both were residents of Sharpsburg. During the afternoon a game of ball was played by the organizations of which the two youths were members. During the progress of the game a quarrel, resulting from the play, sprung up between the two, which developed into a fight. In the encounter Rogers came off victorious. Peace was at last restored between the two by the efforts of mutual friends and the game proceeded. After its conclusion Rogers was standing in the field, when Davis came behind him, and, unseen by his victim, raised the club and dealt him a heavy blow on the head. Rogers fell to the ground senseless, and was taken up and conveyed home by his comrades. A medical examination showed that his skull was fractured. He lingered until early Sunday morning, when he expired. A warrant was at once issued for the arrest of Davis, but he had fled, and has not since been seen.

BILLIARDS.

THE NEW ENGLAND TOURNAMENT.—The proposed tournament, which is to settle the mooted question as to who is the finest player in the New England states, will be inaugurated at Hartford during the closing week of the current month. The arrangement of details has been entrusted to Messrs. M. B. Hewins and Gershom B. Hubbell, respectively champion and ex-champion of Connecticut. Instead of the championship cue being held for two years, subject to all challenges, it is now proposed, with the concurrence of Messrs. Phelan & Collender, who tender it as the chief prize on condition that Hartford subscribes $500 as auxiliary prizes, to give it immediately to the winner of the pending tourney. In that event, the cue, which is even handsomer than that held by Rudolphe, will be known as the emblem of the "Handicap Tournament of New England, 1870." Next year another tournament will be held for a similar or equally appropriate emblem, and so on, year after year. Thus the difficulty of handicapping challenger with challenges will be obviated. Those upon whom it will develope to handicap players in the tournament will have a delicate task. It is assumed that Melvin Foster, Edward Daniels, R. R. Wilmarth, Frank Dennison and George Stone, all residents of New England, will be among the competitors, and it is probable that Messrs. Hewins and Hubbell will also enter, if necessary, to fill up. It will be a nice thing to determine if Foster can give Daniels odds, and it will be just as nice to determine what odds Daniels can give the others. The experiment is new to us, a handicap tourney never having yet been held in this, the land of billiard tournaments.

COOL PROCEEDINGS IN HOT WEATHER.—At the opening of "Patsey's" room, 21 New street, N. Y., on the afternoon of the 25th ult., the Dions, with whom in billiards it is diamond cut diamond, had a tilt in a game of 750. Joseph finished before Cyrille, who, notwithstanding the forced heat, only made 300. Consequently the average of Joseph, whose best run was 539, was just 300. A packed house witnessed this performance, but no one relished it less than Cyrille, who would almost as soon lose that skilful left hand of his as be defeated by his brother. At night they met again, to inaugurate the Grand Central Hotel billiard room, which is fitted up with nine of Phelan and Collender's tables. Before beginning Cyrille promised Joe a beating, and Joe in return pledged himself to lay Cyrille out "as cold as a wedge." There must have been a thousand people in the room in the course of the game, and it was most excruciatingly hot, particularly during the twenty minutes or so during which Joe, as the score will show, was amusing himself at Cyrille's expense. This was in the eighth innings. Cyrille had had a lead of upwards of 800, on an average of nearly 80, and everything looked auspicious for an overwhelming victory, when Joe cruelly put up in succession three runs of triple figures. Here is the score:—

JOSEPH.—0, 75, 0, 0, 5, 114, 806, 142—1,000. Average, 111 1-9.
CYRILLE.—54, 67, 39, 0, 60, 43, 346, 6—810. Average, 67½.

The last seen of Cyrille he was availing himself, in lieu of a balloon, of the baggage elevator near the billiard room entrance. It is proper to say that the night before, at Rudolphe's, in Jersey City, he took Joe into camp, not only in a four ball game, but also in a three ball.

PLAYING IN BROOKLYN.—The Assembly Billiard House Brooklyn, the greater portion of which had been under going alterations for six weeks previously, was formally re-opened on the 26th. The afternoon was set apart for a ladies' matinee, which was well attended, the Dion brothers making merry music with the balls. Joe played very well and Cyrille so much better as to leave Joe nearly out of sight.

JOSEPH.—86, 80, 6, 24, 159, 0, 6, 166—620. Average, 61¾.
CYRILLE.—0, 6, 8, 21, 804, 156, 6, 54—750. Average, 93¾.

BILLIARD BREVITIES.—Frank Twitchell and Charles Fink, both of Rochester, have on hand a home-and-home match, for $50 each game, the first of which Fink lost by 143 in 1,000..... Joseph Dion has entered for the national tournament, to be held next October, probably in Chicago. Cyrille has not entered, as he may go to San Francisco before that time..... William Wicks has gone into bucolic retirement at Rutland, Vt. He is at the Bates House..... The Dions are to give an exhibition on the afternoon of the 6th at J. Russell Sloates, 83 Nassau street..... Edward Bryan, so long with Capt. Boyle, has gone with "Patsey" to 21 New street..... In Rochester, where one could play a game of billiards for any price between ten and twenty-five cents, the room keepers have agreed to charge twenty cents hereafter..... They are endeavoring to reduce the enormous tax on billiards in Norfolk, Va..... The Dions had a tilt a day or two ago at two ball pool, Joe winning. Many years ago, this game of all games for "safety," now little played, was the rage here..... George E. Foster is now in San Francisco, and intends to go into business there as a manufacturer of tables..... Up to the 1st inst. Rudolphe had not arrived, or at least had not made his presence known to the player who is awaiting his arrival most anxiously..... A match of two games, one in Boston and the other in this city, has been proposed between Cyrille Dion and Edward Daniels..... Two players who were wont to keep the billiard world stirring have become remarkably quiet of late. All that is known of Foster and Goldthwait is that the former is in Norwich and the latter in Penn Yan..... Frank Parker holds undisputed the champion one of Illinois; Frank Dennison that of Massachusetts; Adam Kieser that of Wisconsin; Mattie Hewins that of Connecticut, and E. J. Plunkett that of Pennsylvania. Where are all the challengers?

BRUNSWICK HALL, Chicago, was re-opened on the 26th ult., after being "closed for repairs" one month, during which it was entirely renovated and eighteen new tables placed in position.

FRENCH BILLIARDS AT CHICAGO.—A match game of French billiards was played on Friday evening, the 2d inst., at Crosby's Music Hall, Chicago, Ill., between Messrs. Michael Honahan and A. Bassford, of that city, for a purse of $300. The fatiendance was large and appreciated by the cool Southerners, but ill luck was against him, Honahan's steady pegging away finally winning him the game, which was played on a 3 by 10 carom table, with 2½ inch balls, the score standing at the end of the game, Honahan, 300; Bassford, 191, the highest runs being 17 for each player. Time of game, 2.10.

PURSE GAMES AT SARATOGA.—A few patrons of billiards at Saratoga having subscribed $122 towards an exhibition by the Dions, which amount was made into two purses, the first was played for on the night of the 26th, Joseph winning it in eight innings, defeating his brother's St. Joseph's average being 62½, and his leading run 261. The second purse was battled for on the night of the 23d, Cyrille being again defeated by the subjoined score:—

CYRILLE.—0, 17, 42, 64, 108, 204. Average, 72 4-5.
JOSEPH.—0, 147, 112, 12, 12, 200—1,000. Average, 166⅔.

CHAMPIONSHIP COMMITTEE.—Taking it for granted that if played at all, it will be in this city, Messrs. Phelan-Thoman and Secretier have designated Messrs. C. O'Connor, Jas. E. Boyle and Neil Bryant (the latter chairman, and therefore stakeholder) as a committee to supervise the match between Rudolphe and Dion. The committee is the same as for last match, with the exception of Mr. Boyle taking the place of Mr. Joseph O'Connor.

THE RING.

TWO FIGHTS IN ONE RING.

CHARLEY GALLAGHER VANQUISHES MEEKIN.

DRAW BATTLE BETWEEN MORRIS AND O'DONNELL.

The ringties of the Mound City and vicinity were favored with considerable of their favorite sport on the afternoon of Wednesday, Aug. 31st, when the fight between the heavy weights, Charley Gallagher and Owen Meekin, and the light weights, old Steve O'Donnell and Punch Morris, took place at Carroll Island, thirteen miles below St. Louis, having been postponed from the day preceding.

The opening mill was between the first-mentioned pair and was for $250 a side. Gallagher was born in the county of Kildare, Ireland, on the 12th of April, 1847, and is, therefore, over 23 years old. He was trained by Tom Kelly and appeared in excellent condition. Not an ounce of superfluous flesh was visible on his physique. He has fought but one fight previous to the present mill, defeating Geo. Carey on the 26th of last January, for a purse of $100, in fourteen rounds. In that engagement he showed considerable prowess as a wrestler, and gave much exceeding promise as a stalwart athlete that his friends marked out for him a career as a number one fighter. His height is 6 ft. 2¼ in., and weight 184lbs. Owen Meekin is a novice in the fistic arena, never having fought before. He was trained by Ab. Spalding and appeared a model of health and vigor. He is 25 years of age and was born in Ireland. His height is 5 ft. 9¾ in., and weight 165lbs.

Not more than two hundred persons embarked on board the old and shaky "stern wheeler" Charleston, which had been chartered for the excursion by Jack Looney and Tom Kelly, the fizzle of the day prior having deterred many from attempting to go. The arrangements were excellent and not the slightest disturbance occurred on the way to the ground, which was a sandbar just north of the island, the surface being a mixture of loam and dust, which being raised into hillocks during the fight caused more than one trip-up. Frank Curry had been commissioned to provide ropes and stakes and, in addition to the above, very considerately producing a new set of fine hickory stakes, which were quickly planted by willing hands, the ropes rove and everything in apple pie order for the game of fisticuffs at half past two. Gallagher was first to enter the ring, and was cheered loudly as he stepped in, accompanied by his seconds, Jack Looney and Tom Kelly. Meekin was not far behind, and received an equally enthusiastic greeting as he made his appearance, having with him Tom Allen and Fanny Quinn. New seconds were then sworn in, and to the stake, Gallagher having a 'kerchief of green silk, with the harp of ould Erin-Go-Bragh in the centre, encircled by a wreath; Meekin's was also a green togle, decorated with a shamrock upon his person, his condition being very creditable to his trainer.

It would be folly to give seriatim the blows dealt in the eleven rounds which were fought. The referee was selected before the first round, and Gallagher walked up to Meekin in the first round and smashed him three times in the face, forcing him to the earth and smearing the ground with blood. In the fourth round he closed Meekin's right, fracturing the bridge of his nose, and split open his upper lip. In the ninth round he gained the first knock down, lifting Owen clear off his feet and measuring his entire length upon the sand. In the eleventh round Meekin came up with both eyes nearly shut, his face mashed into a jelly, and his superintendent failing from weakness and loss of blood. At the close of that round his seconds saw he had no chance of winning and threw up the sponge in token of defeat. He was outfought at all points. Gallagher, during the engagement, received but a slight scratch on the left side of the face, which was scarcely discernible an hour after the fight. It was a slogging affair throughout, and Meekin seemed unable to even strike his long armed opponent. When the fight had ended and the men left for the boat to be sponged off, Hennessey sprang into the ring and offered to match Gallagher against Madden, to fight within a week or any time suiting the latter's convenience. The proposition was not accepted, however, at that time, though it may result in a match.

THE SECOND FIGHT.

As soon as the excitement over the preceding brief engagement had subsided the ring was cleared for the fight. Steve O'Donnell was born in county Mayo, Ireland, in 1831, stands 5 feet 7 inches in height and weighed 126lbs on the day. He defeated Johnny Lafferty at Eagle Island, Alton, Ill., $400, 52 rounds, 74 minutes, April 18, 1856; was beaten by Jerry Donovan, at the Metairie Course, New Orleans, $50, 86 rounds, 90 minutes, April 8, 1860; beaten by Harry Bell, $6.0, 145 rounds, 2 hours and 10 minutes, City Park, New Orleans, May 7, 1861. He trained along with Gallagher under Tom Kelly's eye. Johnny, alias "Punch" Morris, is about 5 feet 5½ inches in height and weighed in the neighborhood of 122lbs. His first essay in the ring was with Frank Keary, 50 rounds, 33 minutes, Boston, June 10, 1861, which ended in a draw; he next met and was beaten by Billy Donnelly, purse, 18 rounds, Boston, December 25, 1862; beaten by George Cheer, purse, 17 rounds, about 34 minutes, room, New York, Feb. 3, 1868; beaten by Geo. Beddons, purse, 5 rounds, 26 minutes, Fort Erie, Ont., Aug. 20, 1869; beat Jimmy Gallagher, purse, 83 rounds, 1 hour 20 minutes, New Orleans, last spring, and lost by a foul with Jack Ryan several months ago, after fighting 19 rounds. He was by no means in good condition, having had a growl with his trainer, Goulding, and run away from him four days previous, after which he indulged freely in strong drink, and was drunk on the morning of the mill, and had a pretty good load aboard when he entered the ring. After considerable difficulty Tom Allen managed to arrange his principal's country, for which the fight Morris was waited upon by Allen and Barney Aaron, while O'Donnell had the services of Looney and Kelly. Dick Roche was chosen referee and Geo. Duval time keeper.

The fight lasted 51 minutes, during which 42 rounds were fought. O'Donnell had decidedly the best of it up to the thirty-second round, when his wind began to fail him. Morris was unable to deal any material punishment, though he skipped about like the most expert lady jack, and poked away at the old man's frontispiece until he nearly closed both orbits, and flattened his nose smooth to his face. Had he attended strictly to trashing it is thought that he would have won the fight in quick time. In one round Punch took a dive for the sand, and performed the wonderful feat of standing upon his head. A few persons thought he had broken his neck, but after sponging off the sand from his forehead and wiping it out of his eyes, he walked to the scratch, if anything, improved in appearance. Cries of "foul" were made by the partisans of each combatant at least six times during the fight. Both men dropped repeatedly without assisting a blow. The referee was induced to give a decision on account of a violation of the rules, but in every instance decided that the chickens should fight it out. Morris' right eye was completely closed in the twenty second round. He was struck three times on the back of the neck, full in the region of his muscles were well knitted, his eye clear, and his skin the personification of muscular health. Meekin was beautifully drawn in all his points, and is an object for superlatives to dwell upon his person, his condition being very creditable to his trainer.

Mr. Frank B. Culley, the agent, left the company at Salt Lake, and proceeded to San Francisco, to take charge of the California Theatre, in that city. It is believed that Mr. Dupree had with him some $30,000, funds taken for expenses and receipts on the way.

Dupree & Benedict's Minstrels first appeared in this city in the summer of 1869, at the Arch Street Theatre. The enthusiastic reception they met with induced them to lease the Seventh Street Opera House, and on Monday evening, October 25th, 1869, they opened their first regular fall and winter season at that place. The management was among the most enterprising ever located in Philadelphia. By liberal, judicious advertising, it made a success of a place of amusement whose previous history had been one series of failures. Among the killed, according to the correspondence we print above, were Messrs. Dougherty, Reynolds, Heinrich and Nichol

CUPID'S FOIBLES, FOLLIES AND FANCIES.

THE SIDEWALK MISS.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY SAMUEL N. MITCHELL.

She curled her lip and she winked her eye,
She gave me a nudge as I passed her by,
Her rig was nasty and her foot was small,
Her form was graceful and very tall.

She meant to flirt, for she looked the part,
Her bidden from sight was a marble heart,
It was partly covered with vulveteen,
That helped to deck the sidewalk queen.

I turned about and approached the miss
And said "'Tis a pleasant evening this!"
She responded "Yes," but instead of that
Came the slang expression, "Go shake that hat!"

Such a crust cut I ne'er had before
And the sweat in drops from my head did pour,
So with a kind and a sweet "Good bye,"
I left the flirt with a heavy sigh.

She called me back, did the sidewalk miss,
She raised her hand and she threw a kiss,
She winked her eye and she gave a grin,
But I replied, "Oh, that's too thin."

Young men, look out how you flirt at night,
Don't go ahead unless sure you're right;
Be cautious, cunning and wide awake,
Lest you fare like me and get the "shake."

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

A BEAUTIFUL WOMAN.

EQUINIMITY BETWEEN HUSBAND AND WIFE.

Something like a year since a well known pair of this city decided to part company and each leave the other to his or her most desired pursuit. This dissolution of partnership was brought about by the frequently occurring fact that the course of their married life instead of flowing along like a summer stream, whose polished surface is disturbed only here and there by a gentle ripple, was on the contrary subjected to frequent storms and tempestuous squalls which rendered existence in unison a burden and a torment. Such being the case they mutually agreed to part company and each to paddle an individual canoe over such waters as was most preferable. Each promised to leave the other in undisturbed possession of whatever property belonged to them individually, and with this contract they parted, the husband remaining in Providence and the wife going to the house of her sister in a country town something less than a hundred miles from this city. Thus a year passed on, and neither saw or heard anything of the other. During this period "fortune smiled" upon the wife, who is a woman richly endowed with nature's charms, and upon whom beauty has stamped its coveted impress. She amassed quite a comfortable quantity of this world's riches, and desiring to enjoy them more extensively purchased a horse and buggy, with which she drove about in high style and comfort. The husband hearing last week of this worldly prosperity of the former partner of his joys and the creator of all his sorrows, determined to pay her a visit, and in his secret thought resolved to become possessor of the aforesaid at any turn out.' Taking a journey into those parts, he watched his chance and succeeded in stealing the team, and on Thursday morning started home in high glee, driving the coveted prize before him, discovering the strategic movement, took the first train for Providence, arriving here about the same time that her lord drove into town with the horse and buggy. On inquiry, she found that the law would not convict her husband for stealing, recognizing, as it did, the precept "what is mine is thine and what is thine is mine." She then put her woman's wit at work to discover some way to secure a "come-appance" with her husband. At length she discovered that he also owned a horse and buggy, and immediately she resolved upon her course. Finding where he kept the team, she succeeded, all unaided, in securing it, and away she went, whither her husband is in vain trying to ascertain, for great was his astonishment and chagrin on Saturday, returning from his day's employment, which he had made light and pleasant by joyfully contemplating his own shrewdness, to find that the wife of his bosom had completely outgeneraled him, and that, too, with his own weapons.—Providence Press, Aug. 30.

SAD STORY OF A FALLEN FAIR ONE.

A sad story of moral depravity is current in which the girl who figures is reported to have formerly graduated at a seminary in Troy, N. Y. For the past two or three weeks a young, handsome, and evidently accomplished lady has been staying in the city at one of the hotels, where she gave out that she was a book agent. Her intelligence and pleasing address won the confidence and esteem of many, and the hotel proprietors had no suspicion that anything was wrong until within a few days, when it was whispered that the lady had been, since her first coming here, in the habit of visiting various country taverns in the vicinity of Troy, and remaining there all night in company with gentlemen residing in this city. So soon as this was discovered, she was requested to leave the hotel, which she did, and it was supposed that she left the vicinity also. Shortly after, a gentleman reached this city from Morrisania, N. Y., in search of his daughter. He was desirous of finding her and keeping her to return to her home, without giving the matter publicity, and pursued his investigation secretly. He discovered that she had been staying at the hotel by the handwriting in the register, although a fictitious name was written by the girl. He discovered a physician who had treated her, and from him learned the full extent of her depravity. Before doing this, however, he made the doctor acquainted with his relation to the unfortunate. He was then informed of certain voluntary confessions made by the daughter, and also of some of her proposed movements. It is understood that she is now concealed in a country tavern not many miles from the city, and the broken-hearted father is now in search of her. The girl was brought up in strict religious training, and was one of the most promising graduates of a ladies' seminary in Troy. It is said that the girl was seduced by a prominent young merchant in New York city, who kindly gave her a letter of introduction to an acquaintance of his in this city. This is one of the saddest cases of the kind we have been called upon to record. The grief of that white haired, high spirited, yet fondly loving father, was truly sorrowful to behold.—Oswego Palladium.

THE ENGLISH ORGANIST AND HIS STOLEN BRIDE.

A few months ago we published in the CLIPPER the elopement of Lady Blanche Noel, the daughter of an English Baronet, with a Mr. Murphy, the organist to her father. The pair have arrived in New York and are thus described: Mr. Murphy is a short, thick-set man, of Hibernian descent. His wife is a beautiful blonde, petite in stature, and bearing in every lineament of her countenance the evidence that she is both well and nobly bred. Turning to Dod's Peerage and Baronetage of the United Kindom, we find this lady recorded as "Lady Blanche Elisabeth Annunciata Noel, daughter of the second Earl of Gainsborough, born 1846." Her father bears also the titles of Viscount Campden, Baron Barham, and Baron Noel, while her mother was a daughter of the Earl of Errol, one of the oldest Scotch peers, whose title dates as far back as 1453. Brought up in the lap of luxury, this high-born beauty resided under the parental roof in Exton Park, Rutlandshire, England. But a change came on the scene one day. The Earl engaged the services of a new organist to conduct the music in his private chapel. Whether the Lady Blanche was captivated by his manly form or by the heavenly strains which proceeded from his organ, we know not. Within a short time, however, the twain disappeared from Exton Park. Great was the lamentation in the bride's family when the elopement became known, and the fugitives were followed to London, but before they were seen the marriage knot had been tied. The wrathful parent raved and stormed, but to no purpose, and the upshot of the affair was the happy pair sailing for this country, and arriving here safely on the 1st instant.

THE PLEASURES OF BATHING.

At Louisville, Ky., on Aug. 16th, at about 8 o'clock P. M., a party of six persons, three of whom were women, left a house on Madison street, for the purpose of going to the river head, above the city, to bathe. They proceeded to the river, where a skiff was in waiting, and, in shouting. They arrived about nine o'clock at the Towhead, and the party proceeded to prepare for the water by laying aside their garments, and in due time the fun was at its highest. A party of three men, who were aware of what the other party intended doing, followed, and, while the swimmers were having such a jolly time in the water, they slyly stole upon the clothing of the women, and, quicker than it takes to tell it, had it placed in skiff No. 2, and were on the way back to the city. After playing about in the water for near an hour, the swimmers returned to where the clothing had been left, and found it gone. The predicament they were in then was amusing, but a change was necessary, and there was but one resort; that was to return to the city wharf and get clothing as best they could. They went down, and two of the men proceeded to a house on the levee, where they borrowed three dresses from an old woman, and in these alone the women were taken home. When they arrived home they found their clothing lying undisturbed inside the front yard. This little occurrence fully satisfied the female swimmers that there was not so much fun in swimming as they at first supposed.

THE PERILS OF A BEAUTY.—We have lately been put in possession of some facts relative to a series of attempts to ruin a poor orphan girl, which, for meanness and double-dyed villainy, exceed anything which it has been our duty to record for some time. The scenes of the atrocities are located at Lexington, Ky., "the Athens of the West," and Greensburg, Ind., that "classic concentration of suburban loveliness," and, if this is their beginning, they may soon be expected to out-Chicago Chicago. It appears that the early life of the girl was spent in the city of Lexington, where, when a mere child, an attempt was made to injure her character by a scoundrel who pretended to be her friend, and thus won on her confidence and esteem; but the villain was foiled in his lustful designs and was afterwards properly punished. A short time after like a Yankee patent medicine peddler visited that city, and seeing that she was an unsophisticated girl without protection, deliberately set about accomplishing her ruin, and in a short time deceived her into a mock marriage. For this, be it said to the credit of that city, he was soundly thrashed and driven from the town. The girl then came to this city and was taken into a house of refuge. She remained here until some weeks ago, when she went to Greensburg, Ind., in search of employment. She arrived there in the night, and, being alone, made inquiries for a hotel, when one of those vampyres to society that lounge about hotels and railway depots in search of prey, approached her in an improper manner, when she fled. While running away she was met by a young man who represented himself as a police-man, and tendered his services to guide her to a place of safety. But he, too, was a villain, and, having decoyed her to the suburbs of the town, he attempted to forcibly outrage her person. She fought only as a woman who defends her virtue can fight, and while she struggled called loudly for help. Her cries brought a number of men to the spot, who recognized the man, and he was subsequently arrested. Some noble hearted citizens of Greensburg provided the girl with a temporary home. Mr. Hamilton, of Greensburg, has been making diligent inquiries into her former life, and proposes to adopt and educate her. He could not perform a more noble action.—Louisville Courier-Journal, Aug. 29.

THE DALZELL DIVORCE CASE was brought up, in this city, in a different phase on the 30th ult., before Jesse Johnson, referee, it being an examination into an alleged contempt of Augustus S. Dalzell in reading a false affidavit before the Court, and not appearing to answer the order to show cause why alimony should not be paid. On Mrs. Dalzell hearing in England of these divorce proceedings, she employed counsel to have judgment set aside as fraudulently obtained and to ask for alimony. The divorce was procured by Wm. J. Fisher, a divorce lawyer. The ground was alleged adultery on the part of Mrs. D. at the Westchester Hotel, New York, at a time when she had been in England a year. Fisher made out these affidavits through men of straw.

AN ELOPEMENT was prevented on the 30th ult., at Hunter's Point, by the appearance of the wife and two children of the runaway husband.

IN THE WRONG CHAMBER.—An absurd but serious mistake was made in the "wee small hours" of morning, at a house on 41st st., St. Louis, Mo., recently. On the premises lived, with their wives, two young married men, named, respectively, J. A. Johnson and Patrick Tracy. Johnson occupies the first floor and Tracy the second. At the time mentioned (about two o'clock), Tracy came to the door of his domicil in a condition far from sober, and with his night key let himself in. How drunk he was we do not venture to assert, but he was certainly affected by the "cup that inebriates" to the extent of being unable to distinguish the first from the second floor of the house, and mistaking the best chamber of the Johnsons for his own, reeled into it and tumbled into bed with the peacefully sleeping Mr. and Mrs. J. The lady, being the lighter sleeper, awoke, and angry at finding herself disturbed by Tracy, whom she supposed to be her husband, addressed some anappish remark to him. Tracy tried to mumble a reply to what he supposed to be a certain lecture from his wife. This aroused the masculine Johnson, who, finding something was wrong, savagely attacked the obvious inhabitant of the upper regions of the house. The blows rained thick and fast upon Tracy's devoted head, and sobered him to such an extent that it occurred to him that he was getting beaten. He in turn assailed Johnson, and, being a powerful young fellow, rather got the better of him in the fight. When thoroughly aroused to his position and the attendant circumstances, he beat a hasty retreat and returned no more to the neighborhood. To say that the Johnsons were mad would but faintly express their feelings, and the neglected wife of the recreant Tracy still remains up stairs, and is madder than anybody. The affair is certainly ludicrous, but is also deplorable, as it may possibly effect the separation of two loving wives from their hitherto devoted and affectionate husbands.—St. Louis Democrat.

A PRETTY WHITE GIRL MARRIED TO A NEGRO.—A negro named Theodore Hamilton, aged twenty-three years, and claiming to hail from New York city, presented himself in Justice Jecko's court, on Aug. 24th, bearing upon his arm a spruce looking white maiden named Emma Green, who has been living in the alley near Market street, between Third and Fourth, St. Louis, Mo. The negro, who was unusually black but cleanly in dress, claimed to be the son of Rensselaer Hamilton, of New York, and a colored woman named Jane Dubois. The would-be bride stated that she was born in Davenport, Iowa, and has resided in the classic alley mentioned above, for nearly three years. Her mother's name was Sarah White, and she was never married. Justice Jecko questioned them closely for about half an hour, and explained to them the difficulties which would prevent a consummation of their connubial aspirations. Section 2, of chapter 113, Revised Statutes, provides among other cases of prohibited marriages, that no justice or other authority shall unite a negro to a white person, which he told this they manifested considerable chagrin. The woman asserted that her design in becoming the wife of her dusky companion was to elude examination under the social evil ordinance. He had made known her wants to Theodore, who had promised to marry her, and for that purpose had procured a new suit of clothes and arrayed himself in the height of fashion. She confessed that she had been in three justices' offices, where she had been told the same story. Triumph, however, she would, even if forced to go to Illinois and live with the negro, with or without the marriage junction. The pair left the office greatly depressed in spirits, but finally made their way to Justice Keating's, where they were indissoluibly tied.

THE SOCIAL EVIL.—Cincinnati, O., is preparing to follow the footsteps of St. Louis, Mo., on this subject. The committee on law and the city attorney have been ordered to prepare an ordinance embracing all the main points of the St. Louis law.

AULD SCOTIA'S ATHLETES.

The N. Y. Caledonian Club's Annual Festival.

Thursday, the 1st day of September, 1870, will long be remembered by the sons and daughters of Scotland as the fourteenth annual celebration of the New York Caledonian Club, when there was a very large attendance, for at 5 P. M. there could not have been less than eighteen or twenty thousand persons present. Every platform, gallery or seat that could be occupied was filled by merry lads and lassies indulging in the light fantastic, while the sloping grounds and the large grand stand erected by the club for their guests to witness the games and sports, were one dense mass of humanity, all of whom seemed to be well pleased with the efforts of the different committees in catering for the enjoyment and amusement of all. There were comparatively no complaints, nor was the enjoyment of the day in any sense marred. Every year the meetings have been more largely attended, especially by Americans, to whom they have become interesting on account of the fine display of athletic sports and their natural love for the picturesque; for it requires no great stretch of imagination to take one's self out by Pike to Ferguson, Cuthbert and Fiynn and be transported to some large gathering of the clans so graphically described by Scott and other authors, where the representatives of scores of families would be found, putting forth their chamption to do honor to their name and color. A majority of the New York Caledonia Club, with their guests from Philadelphia, Brooklyn, Hoboken, Auburn, N. Y.; Pittston, Mass.; Boston, Mass.; Hartford, Conn., and other well known clubs assembled at the Caledonia Hall, on Sullivan street, early in the morning, dressed in their various kilts, plumed bonnets, shawls, &c., and armed with claymores, dagger or pistol, and many of their breasts blazing with medals won in closely contested fields—not of blood—but of strength, agility and skill. Among the famous tartans worn were those of the Stordons, the Royal Stuart, the MacGregor, MacPherson, MacDonald, MacNab, the Sutherlands, the Douglas, Murray, Argyle, Graem, Ross and Robertson, after forming in procession, with the club banner and St. Andrew's Cross in their midst, headed by the assembled pipers of a dozen clubs, and under the command of Chief George Mitchell, made a short march on Broadway, and then the whole party proceeded to Jones' Woods, where, at 10 A. M., the day's proceedings were inaugurated by a grand reel, danced by all the members of the club and their guests, after which the athletic sports commenced, and were continued until dark, when it was found necessary to postpone several of the most attractive features until some other occasion. Among the most noted athletes present, was the famous Scottish athlete Donald Dinnie, who was the favorite in sports of the day. He was born at Aboyne, Aberdeenshire, in 1838, and commenced his career as an athlete in 1857. Since then he has gained upward of 1,500 prizes, 1,000 of them being for throwing the hammer, putting the stone, tossing the caber, running, leaping, wrestling, etc. He has also gained 62 silver medals, and the champion gold medal, awarded by the Glasgow Celtic Society, for throwing the hammer, in 1867. Forty of these medals are champion medals, and had to be held for three successive years before becoming his property. He is acknowledged to be one of the best specimens of muscular development that has ever appeared in Scotland. The following are some of his dimensions:—Height, 6 feet 1 inch; round chest, 45½ inches; arm, 15½ inches; thigh, 25½ inches; weight, 210 pounds. The following are some of his best feats on level ground:—Putting the stone, 22 pounds, 39 feet 6 inches; 16 pounds, 47 feet 6 inches; throwing the hammer, 22 pounds, 97 feet; of 16 pounds, 120 feet, fair stand. Turning the body with the hammer, he has made a 22-lb. hammer 120 feet, and has thrown a hammer weighing 18 pounds, 130 feet. At both feats, stone and hammer, he excels anything that has ever been recorded in Scotland. Peter Frazer, of Montreal, Canada, and James Melrose, of Hartford, both excellent in their several feats, especially Frazer, whose vaulting with pole won him rounds of applause by his quiet and elegant style of vaulting. In tossing the heavy caber all failed, Donald Dinnie being the nearest, he lifting the caber, which was a clean stick of wood about 20 feet long, 10 inches in diameter at the butt, tapering to about 5 inches at the top. This Dinnie lifted with ease, taking it by the small end, elevating it straight up, and, with a tremendous heave threw it, the small end striking the ground about 20 feet from him. For a second it wavered and then fell sideways at considerably of an angle forwards, however. Other contestants tried their luck; none could, however, throw it, several not being able to get it up. The light caber Dinnie refused to throw, claiming that it was too light. The following are the winners in the several games, dances and feats of strength, as decided upon by the judges:—Messrs. Flander, Gibson, Rutherglen, Kernan, Beenmine and Chadwick. The prizes consisted of medals for the first prize, $10 for the second, and $5 for the third, except in the cases of the two long races, where the prizes were as specified.

18. One Mile Running Race.—This race was open to all comers at $1 entrance fee. The prizes were respectively $50, $25, and $15. There were about a dozen entries, most of the contestants being distanced, however, after a couple of circuits. The first prize was won without much trouble in 4:48, by Mr. Hardinge's novice, "Scott," of Philadelphia; the second by Fitzgerald, and the third by Adams.
20. High and Fling.—James West, J. Campbell, J. D. Robertson.
21. Jig, Sand and Jump.—Peter Fraser, first, 40 feet 10 inches; Donald Dinnie, second, 40 feet 4 inches; — Addison, third, 37 feet 7 inches.

A quoiting match was also played during the day, the prizes for which were taken by J. Gibson, Alexander McGregor, and J. R. Smith, in the order named. The games were ended at this point on account of the late hour that had been reached, and the members of the club, with their invited guests, adjourned to the club room on Sullivan street, where the twenty-sixth performance on the programme was contested. This was an exhibition of bag-pipe playing, the "Reel" and "Strathspey" being performed. The winners were W. Clelland, of New York. First, Peter Bowman, of Brooklyn, second, and Charles Grant, of Hoboken, third. And thus ended the largest attended, the hottest contested, with largest number of contestants ever at a Scottish festival in this country.

IMPORTATION OF GREYHOUNDS.—One of our English exchanges states that the well known greyhounds, Saladin and Bettielheim, started for this country in the steamer Wisconsin, having been consigned to Major W. H. Cryer, of Salem, O. Saladin, by Plapdragon, out of Miss Orritt, is a fine, large, lengthy dog, has capital feet and legs, and goes a good pace. He beat Belligerent in the final course for the Scarisbrick Cup at the last meeting, having won all his previous courses like a good greyhound. He also ran twice, in 1864 and 1865, for the Waterloo Cup. His staying powers are undeniable, and no doubt he will make a good stud dog. Bettielheim is by Rienzi, out of Note. In 1867 she ran in the last four for the Waterloo Cup, beating in capital style Maniolang, Constable, Desperation and Rather Improved. After her clever victory in the latter she was thought to have a good chance, but was bowled over in the fifth round by Lobella, the winner of the cup.

BASE BALL.

THE ATLANTICS IN CHICAGO.

THEIR DEFEAT BY THE WHITE STOCKINGS.

Probably no result of a contest out west was received in this city with greater surprise than the announcement that the Atlantics had been defeated by the White Stockings in Chicago. The closely contested match at Rockford and its result, showed that the Atlantics were in good trim for play, for their victory on that occasion was noteworthy under the circumstances, as the Rockfords had previously defeated the Athletics and White Stockings, and the Atlantics anticipated a hot time in that game. The fact of it was, however, that flushed with their victory over the Forest City nine, they entered Chicago too confident of having an easy task before them in defeating a nine like the White Stockings, who had of late been the recipients of so many bad beatings at the hands of those powerful clubs than the Atlantics; and hence they went into the game on the "soft thing" principle and met the reward of underrating their opponents, as the Athletics did in Philadelphia in the fratrnal match. Without further preface we proceed to give the details of the game, as reported in the Chicago Tribune:—

THE GAME.

But to return to the game itself. Notwithstanding the general belief that the occasion was to be one of defeat for the home club, about four thousand people were in attendance at Dexter Park, merely to see the famous Atlantics beat the White Stockings. The day was clear and cool, but a strong south wind prevailed, greatly to the detriment of effective batting. On this account it was evident that a comparatively small number of runs would be made, for the time both nines appeared on the ground, the neatly-attired, gentlemanly appearing visitors being greeted with a hearty round of applause. From first to last the crowd manifested an intense interest in the game, vociferously approving brilliant plays on either side alike. The selection of an umpire was readily got along with. Capt. Wood suggested Mr. Nick Bohnse, formerly of the Railway Union Club of Cleveland, who has umpired several games in Chicago; and of honor, believes everybody else to be the same until he finds out differently, coincided in the choice without hesitation or inquiry. He had no occasion to regret his assent, for Mr. Bouse gave entire satisfaction to the players of both sides, and to the spectators as well. Captain Wood, winning the toss, chose the field, and at 3:13 the Atlantics went to the bat for the first innings.

First Innings.—Pearce grasped the ash with an air of conscious capability, but he somehow failed to whack Pinkham's left handed curve with his customary sanchalance. His first effort resulted in a high foul fly, which was taken in with a graceful sweep of the arm by Smith gave Meyerele a swift grounder, which he failed to handle, and the striker reached first. Starr sent one to Wood, who bounded his ball, running for second. Chapman planked a bounder straight at Pinkham, who bagged the ball, secured it, and a pretty throw to McAtee ended the innings with a "chalk" for every one of the terms with perfect "tranquility." McAtee disposed of a grounder so hot that Smith's eyes provided a cooling process in being helped along by Wood's safe hit about his face, caught by Pinkham. Cuthbert picked out a vacancy between Smith and Pearce, and sent a spiteful one there, so that he got first. Wood second, and McAtee called a sanitary cheer for the first run. Flynn was sent to first on called balls, Cuthbert having stolen second. Wood was the first victim, being caught napping at second by Zettlein to Pike. Treacy struck at over Pike's head, but the wind was so strong as to carry it outside of the foul line, and Pike, by rapid running, got it nicely on the bound. Cuthbert got to third, and Flynn to second on a passed ball, but both died there as King retired on a grounder shortly handled, but finely thrown, by Smith. One run, not earned.

Second Innings.—Ferguson hit to Wood, and failed to reach first, Zettlein struck a vicious bounder to Pinkham, who took it in one hand, and "the charmer" retired without an effort to get to his base. Hall popped a fly to King to secure. Another blank. Meyerle was captured by Smith on a foul bound by Treacy. Pearce, giving him a grounder, which he failed to gather in time for an out. Duffy fouled out to Ferguson, McAtee flied to Pearce, and the side was out for a goose egg, Pinkham being left on first.

3. Pike sent a swift one along the first base line and gained a bag, three stealing seconds, thanks to the wind, which spoiled a good throw by King. McDonald flew out to Meyerle. Pearce hit a safe fly to short right, getting first, and Pike third. Smith sent a fly to Cuthbert, which he misunderstood everyone by muffing it, but he had it in an instant, and, by a fine throw, secured Pearce at second. Pike tagging the innings with an unearned run.....Wood put a safe one between Smith and Pearce and made his base. Cuthbert gave Chapman an easy fly. Flynn's opponent was out short by Zettlein to Start. Treacy flew out to McDonald, leaving Wood on second. Another whitewash.

4. Chapman, after having enjoyed a reprieve in a foul bound which King should have taken, got his first on a safe liner to left, scooped up Ferguson's hot grounder and passed it to Wood, and he to McAtee in time to nip the striker. This was base ball in the infield and the crowd was delighted. Zettlein struck out to King. No run.....King, after sending a foul fly to right, where McDonald muffed it, put one in centre, which Hall refused to trust. Meyerle gave Ferguson a good bound. Pinkham hit to Pearce, whose high throw to first Start failed to hold in one hand, the striker directly reaching second on a passed ball, but was left there, as Duffy was retired by Pike to Start. No run.

5. Hall was enabled to reach first through an underthrow by Meyerle, after a good stop. Pike spun a grounder to right, which Mc-Atee tried in vain to reach, but Wood was forced to a second by Hall, who sharp work secured the out, Hall reaching second. Meyerle sent a fly to Wood. Pearce was retired on a foul fly by Ferguson. Pike lied on a bad overthrow by Duffy to the home plate. Smith earned his base by a safe liner to left, going to third on an overthrow to Wood. Pearce was retired by Pike to Ferguson, Cuthbert and Flynn came in.

6. After being favored by the wind in carrying two fouls beyond first, although he only tried very hard to get them, Start finally took first on three balls. Ferguson flew out to Cuthbert. Zettlein's grounder was well stopped by Duffy. Start, on Zettlein's first and Chapman second, each then got to the base along on an overthrow by Hall fouled out to Meyerle on the fly, Start getting third and Chapman second and third. No run. ...Meyerle flew out to Mc-Atee's grounder, which he tried very hard to get them, Start finally took first on three balls. Ferguson flew out to Cuthbert. Zettlein's grounder was well stopped by Duffy. Start

The Long Branch Fall Trotting Meeting.

FIRST DAY—SATURDAY, AUG. 27TH.

ST. ELMO WINS THE $2,500 PURSE FOR 2:23 HORSES, AND COL. RUSSELL THE $2,000 PURSE FOR 2:30 HORSES.

The Long Branch Trotting Meeting, at Monmouth Park, commenced on Saturday, Aug. 27th, and continued over three days, during which upwards of $14,000 in purses was trotted for. The great success, pecuniary and otherwise, which attended the inaugural race meeting at Monmouth Park, induced the association to give a trotting meeting before the season closed at this favorite seaside resort, and the opening day's sport was witnessed by a large attendance. There were two purses given on Saturday; the first of $2,000, for 2:33 horses, and the second of $2,500, for 2:30 horses. Ten horses entered and started for the first purse—St. Elmo, Thomas Jefferson, Lady Wells, Fanny Lambert, C. W. Patterson, Nelly Morrill, Unknown, Lizzie Keller, Sallie and Revenue. Seven heats—the sixth a dead heat—were required to decide the race. Unknown won the first heat, Lizzie Keller the second, Jefferson the third, St. Elmo the fourth and fifth, made a dead heat of the sixth, and won the seventh and race. Revenue was drawn after the second heat; Sallie and Lizzie Keller after the third, and Unknown distanced in the fifth. Summary:—

The second race was for a purse of $2,500, for 2:30 horses, and the following five came upon the course to start:—Colonel Russell, Edna, Mary, Charley Green and Carroll. Colonel Russell had the call before the race over the others, but after the first heat, which was won by Edna in 2:29¼, the latter was sold for as much as all the others combined. Colonel Russell won the second heat in 2:30¼, and he returned to the head of the pole at even against the field. Backers were nonplussed and found themselves completely at sea when Edna won the third heat in 2:33¼. They tried to hedge by buying her in pools and again went overboard, for Colonel Russell won the fourth heat in 2:33¼ and the fifth heat and race in 2:33. A better day's trotting has seldom been witnessed.

SECOND DAY—TUESDAY, AUG. 30TH.

There was a good attendance on the second day, for the weather was charming, and the card promised a fine days' sport. The first race was for a purse of $2,500, for horses that never beat 2:28; the winner taking $1,500, the second horse $750, and the third $250. The race was a mile heats, three in five, in harness, and the five contesting horses entered were:—O. A. Hickoks' b m Western Girl; D. Mace's s m Idol; M. Roden's s g License; W. H. Borst's b g John J. Bradley, and F. J. Nodine's ch m Belle Strickland. Budd Doble drove Idol, in consequence of Dan Mace being sick. The other horses were driven by the parties entering them. The race proved one of unusual interest and was another surprise to the knowing ones, who caught it heavy, pecuniarily, by backing the favorites, Idol and License. These two sold nearly equal in pools—Idol bringing $200; License, $210; Western Girl, $130; Bradley, $105, and Belle Strickland, $20. In the first heat, while scoring, License cast a shoe, and while this was being replaced, the tactics of the party connected with Western Girl became evident. They had quietly bought her in the pools sold previously in which Idol and License were the favorites, but as all the money had not been got on, they took advantage of the delay in replacing License's shoe, to make her the first choice in the pools now sold, and she brought almost as much as Idol, while License went back in favor. Idol brought $115; Western Girl, $100; License, $95; Bradley, $70; Belle Strickland, $15. Idol won the first heat by two lengths, from Belle Strickland in 2:30; Western Girl six lengths behind the latter, and License last. In the pools Idol now sold for $200; Western Girl, $100; License, $40; Bradley, $45; Belle Strickland, $10. Belle took the lead at the start, openend out a a wide gap very quickly, and retaining her lead throughout, won the heat by ten lengths from Idol in 2:27¾; Western Girl, who did not go for either this or the preceding heat, last of all. The cat was now let out of the bag, for in the pools now sold Western Girl was a hot favorite, bringing $225; Idol, $170; Bradley, $155; Belle Strickland, $40, and License, $30. Belle Strickland was allowed the lead on sufrance for three quarters of a mile, when Western Girl went up, passed her and came home the winner by a length in 2:28, Bradley beating Belle half a length for second place. It was now $100 to $60 on Western Girl, and all the money having been got on, she went and won the fourth heat in 2:27¾, and the fifth and race in 2:29¼; Belle Strickland winning second and Idol third.

FIRST RACE.—Purse, $2,500, for horses that never beat 2:26; $1,500 to first, $750 to second and $250 to third horse.

THE SECOND RACE

was for a purse of $2,500, for horses that never beat 2:33. The entries were Hoispur, Henry and Jim Rockey. Henry had just changed trainers, and, being slightly lame, his owner declined to start him, while Jim Rockey was not on the ground. Hotspur, therefore, trotted over for the half forfeits.

SECOND RACE.—Purse $2,500, for horses that never beat 2:33; $1,500 to first, $750 to second, $350 to third horse.

W. Doble's b g Hotspur	received forfeit.
John Lovett's b g Henry	paid forfeit.
George Nelson's br g Jim Rockey	paid forfeit.

THIRD DAY—WEDNESDAY, AUG. 31ST.

GOLDSMITH MAID WINS THE $5,000 PURSE AND BLACK CROOK THE SILVER PUNCH BOWL.

There was only a small attendance of visitors on the last day of the meeting, notwithstanding the fineness of the weather. The first race was for $5,000; for all horses; the winner taking $3,500; the second horse, $1,000, and the third, $500. The entries were Budd Doble's b m Goldsmith Maid, W. H. Borst's br g George Wilkes, and Norris Holcomb's b m Lucy, driven by M. Woden. There was no betting, not a solitary pool being disposed of on the race, and few bets taken even at the tempting odds of $100 to $15 on the Maid winning:—

First Heat.—George Wilkes had the pole, Lucy the centre, and the favorite outside. A good send off was had, and the horses trotted evenly around to the quarter pole home in front, and at the quarter pole was half a length ahead of George Wilkes, who was as far before the Maid; time, 37½ seconds. On the far side Wilkes broke up and fell behind, Lucy opening a gap of two lengths at the half mile pole in 1:12½, Goldsmith Maid as far before George Wilkes. The favorite commenced closing near the three-quarter pole, and was on Lucy's wheel at the head of the stretch. A short struggle between the pair ensued, in which both left their feet, but Goldsmith Maid recovering first came steadily along and won the heat by a length in 2:23¼, George Wilkes a dozen lengths behind Lucy.

Second Heat.—George Wilkes was away first, with Lucy next and the Maid last. The latter quickly went to the front, and led Wilkes two lengths at the quarter pole in 37½ seconds. On the back stretch Lucy passed George Wilkes, and was within a couple of lengths of the Maid as the half mile pole was passed in 1:13½. Lucy broke up at the head of the stretch, and Wilkes following her example, the Maid came away by herself, and won the heat by half a dozen lengths; Lucy beating Wilkes two lengths. Time, 2:24.

Third Heat.—Wilkes was again in front at the start, with Lucy last. At the turn Goldsmith Maid went ahead, and had opened a gap of two lengths at the quarter, trotted in 37½ seconds; Lucy second. The maid widened her lead to four lengths on the far side, but Lucy commenced trotting fast on approaching the half mile pole, and had reduced the Maid's lead one half at that point; time 1:12½. On the lower end Lucy gained rapidly, and got to the Maid's shoulder at the home-stretch turn, but unable to keep up the rate of speed, she broke up twice in succession, and the race was gone. Goldsmith Maid coming home a winner of the heat and race by two lengths in 2:25; Lucy took second and Wilkes third money.

MONMOUTH PARK, Long Branch, Aug. 31st.—PURSE, $5,000; $3,500 to the first, $1,000 to the second, and $500 to the third horse; mile heats, best three in five, in harness.

was for a magnificent silver punch bowl value $750, for gentlemen's horses that had never trotted for money. There were five entries, but two only started: W. Jarvis' bl g Black Crook and W. B. Bonner's g g Johnny. The former was a great favorite, but there was little betting. Johnny broke at the turn and commenced dancing a break down, losing nearly a quarter of a mile, and getting distanced. Time, 2:47½. The winner belongs to Mr. Gould, the restaurant keeper.

TROTTING AT PATERSON, N. J.—A trotting match for $2,000, mile heats, best three in five, came off on the Paterson Course, on the 25th ult., which created a great amount of interest, and attracted a large attendance of the residents of Passaic and Bergen counties. It was between two rival six year old Hambletonian stallions, John P. Ackerman's black horse Hamperion, and Jacob J. Hopper's bay horse Dr. Palmerly, and the match was made to decide their relative merits as fast trotting sires. Dr. Palmerly was the favorite before the race, $100 to $40 being currently offered, but after he lost the first heat $100 to $60 was laid on Hamperion, who was driven by Hiram Howe. The second heat was won by Dr. Palmerly, who this time had the able assistance of Carl Burr as driver. In the third heat Hamperion was distanced. Time, 2:51; 2:49¾; 2:48¾. Summary:—

GLADIATEUR FOR SALE.—Owing to the political situation the whole of the extensive racing stud of Count La Grange are to be brought to the hammer on Sept. 5th, at Messrs. Tattersall's mile stables in London. Among them is included the celebrated Gladiateur, the best racehorse of his day, who won, in his two, three and four year old career, stakes amounting to over $140,000. His triumphs were the two Thousand Guineas, the Newmarket Derby, Clearwell, and Trial Stakes and the Claret Stakes at Newmarket; the Epsom Derby (worth that year the unprecedented sum of $34,000); the Drawing Room and Bentinck Memorial Stakes at Goodwood, the Gold Cup at Ascot, the St. Leger Stakes and Doncaster Stakes at Doncaster, and the Grand Prize of Paris, and Grand Prix du France Imperial at Paris. He is by Monarque (winner of the Goodwood Cup in 1857, when the American horses, Prior and Prioress, took part in the race), out of Miss Gladiator, by Gladiator. As the war will prevent continental turfmen from purchasing, it would be an incalculable benefit to the American thoroughbred to secure this renowned horse for this country.

POINT BREEZE TROTTING MEETING.—The Point Breeze Park Association, composed of gentlemen who admire speed and fine action in the horse, are holding their trotting meeting this week at the Point Breeze track, a short distance from Philadelphia, and of easy access, with no rivers to cross, which so frequently interferes with the progress to the tracks on Long Island, N. Y. The meeting opens on Tuesday, Sept. 6th, continuing on the 7th, 8th and 9th, and for each day a capital programme is offered, the premiums to be awarded to the winners being very liberal, and showing a large field of competitors. It is to be hoped that admirers of trotting in that city will turn out in large numbers, and by their presence give aid and encouragement to the association, and thereby assist in popularizing legitimate sports of the turf. There will be some very exciting trials of speed during the meeting, in which a number of the fastest stock in the country will participate.

A WONDERFUL PERFORMANCE—TIME, 2:38!!!

The great trotting match for $5,000, between Mr. George Alley's bay colt Startle, and Mr. Ben. Wright's black colt Lothair, both three year olds, mile and repeat, in harness, came off at Fleetwood Park, Morrisania, N. Y., Thursday, the 1st inst. The attendance was large, for the match had created considerable sensation in sporting circles, and gentlemen turfmen from all parts of the country were present to witness the contest. Startle is by Rysdick's Hambletonian, dam Lizzie Walker, by American Star, and is consequently nearly brother in blood to the renowned Dexter. He was bred by Mr. Charles Backman, of Stoneyford Stud Farm, and was purchased as a two year old by Mr. George Alley, a gentleman who has a keen eye for a promising trotting youngster, having purchased Dexter when a four year old colt, and owned him during the greater part of his public turf career. Startle is a beautiful bay, with three white feet, a little white on his forehead and white snip on the nose. He stands fifteen hands and an inch, with fine muscular development in the proper places, and fine graceful action when in motion. He was driven by Carl Burr, who weighed 207lbs., or 8lbs. over weight, while the sulky itself was fully 30lbs. over weight—both which should not be forgotten in estimating the merits of the winner's performance. His opponent, Lothair, is a jet black colt with small white star on the forehead, stands fifteen hands two inches, and finely developed all over. He was bred in the state of Maine by Mr. Norcross, and is by Gilbreth Knox, a son of General Knox, a trotting stallion enjoying as great popularity in the eastern states as Hambletonian does in this section. His dam's pedigree is unknown, and Lothair himself is owned in Boston by Mr. B. Wright. A large delegation of eastern men came on to New York to see the race, and bet heavily on the black colt, of whose winning they felt very confident and who was driven by Dan Mace.

The day was very fine, but the track was not fast, in consequence of the depth of dust. Lothair was the first to show on the track. He had been the favorite until the day before the race, when Startle's friends, on the strength of a fast trial the colt had passed through, began to back him in earnest, and he grew in favor so rapidly that just before the start offers of $100 to $30 on him found few takers.

First Heat.—The colts scored five times before getting the word, which was at last given to an even send off. Startle almost immediately showed in front, and as the upper turn was rounded he was three lengths ahead of Lothair. He kept steadily widening the gap, and, Lothair breaking, he increased his lead to fully twenty lengths at the quarter pole, trotted in 37½ seconds. Lothair made a second break on the lower side and Startle was fully one hundred yards before him at the half mile pole in 1:17, and the same at the three quarter pole in 1:56½, he apparently going at an easy exercising gait. Passing the draw gate on coming up the home-stretch, where Mr. Alley was stationed, that gentleman called to Carl Burr to go faster. A single touch of the whip and the colt struck a 2:30 gait in a moment and came past the stand a hundred and eighty yards in front of Lothair, winning the race in a single heat by distancing his rival in 2:38, the fastest three year old time on record, except that made by Blackwood, who carried the regular weight of 150lbs. After the race Mr. Bonner became the owner of the colt for the alleged price of $30,000. Summary:—

The stakes will be known as the Breakfast Party Stakes, Dinner Party Stakes, and Supper Party Stakes, from $1,000 up to $10,000. There will be four races on each of the four days, consisting of Hurdle-racing over eight hurdles, and Dashes of two miles for three year old colts and fillies; Monumental City Handicaps, Sweepstakes, &c., &c.

AT THE PALMER DRIVING PARK.—The annual meeting of the Palmer Driving Park Association was commenced in that place on Tuesday, Aug. 30th, with a trot for horses that had never beaten three minutes. Six horses started, the b m Hattie taking the first heat in 2:51; the g g Shoo Fly taking the next three in 2:50; 2:54¾; 2:54¾, beating Hattie, Southern Chief, Annie, Lady Kellogg and Frank. A second race was commenced but not finished, Black Diamond winning the first and third heats, Fred. Taylor the second, and Buckskin the fourth and fifth, when a postponement on account of darkness was necessitated. On the 31st the horses again came together, when Buckskin took the heat and first money, Black Diamond being second. Time, 2:45¾; 2:44¾; 2:44¾; 2:45—time of last heat not given. The double team race was won by Rubber Ben and Lady Walton, after McClellan and Richmond Boy had taken the first two heats. Time, 2:48; 2:43; 2:45; 2:47; 2:43. The second day's trotting was concluded with a contest between Thomas Jefferson, Black Diamond and Cloud. In the first heat Cloud was distanced, Black Diamond winning the heat. Jefferson then won the second heat, following it up by distancing Black Diamond in the third. Time, 2:45; 2:46; 2:38.

AT MYSTIC PARK, MASS.—On the 31st ult. there was a fair attendance on this track to witness a contest between certain unknown horses. The following is the summary:—

NEW JERSEY BLUE LAWS.—On Sunday, June 13th, 1869, the well known Capt. I. Rynders was driving over the Hackensack Bridge of the Paterson and New York Plankroad Company with a fine blooded three year old colt, that had trotted his half mile in 1:20, and for which the captain had been offered $10,000. The colt caught his foot in a hole in the bridge, stumbled, became frightened and ran away, throwing the captain out of the wagon and slightly injuring him. The draw being opened at the time, the colt fell into the river and was drowned. The captain sued the Plank-road Co. for $10,000, and the case came before Judge Bedle, in the Bergen Co. Court, a few days ago, and after the case had been continued two or three days the learned judge rendered a decision of non-suit, on the grounds that the accident occurred on Sunday, on which day a man has no legal right to exercise a horse in New Jersey.

PEDESTRIANISM.

THE GREAT THREE MILE RACE.

KERARONWE DEFEATS DEERFOOT.

The match hitherto announced in our columns between those celebrated Indians, Deerfoot and Keraronwe, for $400, three miles, came off on the Montreal Lacrosse grounds, Montreal, C. E., on Saturday, Aug. 27th, and terminated in the defeat of the veteran Deerfoot by his more youthful opponent. He belongs to the Seneca tribe of Indians, and lived for a long time in England, where he won many matches and gave a number of exhibitions of his fleetness of foot which were considered truly marvellous and earned for him the name he bears. In these matches he has beaten the most celebrated pedestrians in England, making 11 miles and 700 yards in an hour, Jan. 12, 1863, a feat never accomplished by any other. A few years ago he returned to America, residing most of the time in Buffalo. He is now about forty-five years of age. Keraronwe, an Iroquois Indian, is a native of Caughnawaga and is well known to the people of Montreal. He holds the title of Champion Snow-Shoe Runner of Canada, and is considered the swiftest man in that part of the country. On one side was youth and muscle—on the other, age, prestige and experience. The weather was beautifully cool and fine and the ground in splendid condition. Some of the little hollows and irregularities on the course were levelled over, so that the track, which, however, is not one of the best for the purpose, was very fair running order. The course was measured off a quarter mile around the field, and was marked with small colored flags. At the starting point the Red, White and Blue was hoisted, around which stood the starter, the judge, the representatives of the press, &c. The course was kept free from intrusion by a number of policemen, and a fair and uninterrupted contest was the result. The judges were Mr. Hughes and a member of the Lachine Boating Club. Jas. Taylor, of the Tyne crew, was starter. By half-past five, the time at which the men made their appearance on the ground, the grand stand and the ground in front were filled with spectators, a large proportion of whom were from the primitive precincts of Caughnawaga. Indians of all shades of complexion, squaws dressed in all the colors of the rainbow and more, and papooses of all sizes and ages; the whole population of Caughnawaga, in fact, turned out to witness the triumph or defeat of their champion.

Previous to the match two other races were announced to take place, namely, a mile race, open to all, for prizes of $4 and $2; and a half mile race, Indians barred, for prizes of the same amount. For the first there was only one entry, that one being Daillebout, whose known abilities were, no doubt, the cause of his having the course all to himself. He was allowed to run around alone, and did the quarters in the remarkably good time of 1 min., 1:12, 1:15 and 1:18 respectively. For the second race there were two entries:—G. Anderson and J. Logan, the former winning in 2:16.

In a few minutes the two dusky rivals were seen slowly approaching the starting point, accompanied by their respective backers; the younger bare legged, with light pumps on their feet, and the elder arrayed in tights colored tights, the physique of the two men presented a marked contrast; Deerfoot being nearly a head taller than his opponent, and of rather an engaging build; while the other looked the very perfection of a running man, the muscles of his legs standing out with marked prominence at every step he took, and his deep chest bespeaking almost unlimited power of lungs. Deerfoot walked slowly around the course for the purpose of becoming familiar with the ground, and then took his place beside his rival. The men shook hands, a few seconds' pause took place, the starter gave the word "go!" and the men darted off, Keraronwe leading amid the cheers of his friends; the other, by the time the first corner was reached, a couple of yards behind. Keraronwe made the first lap in minute (exactly the same as time made by Daillebout in an hour previous), Deerfoot in 1:03. After this the men settled down steadily to their work, Keraronwe running down the incline at the west end of the field at a frightful rate of speed, and Deerfoot gaining on him coming up the east end; passing the starting point from five to eight seconds behind him each time. This order of things was kept up until the eleventh round was reached, when Deerfoot began rapidly to decrease the distance between him and his rival, making the eleventh lap only one second behind him. His backers now commenced to look up, many believing that the old man had been holding himself back for the last round. Even bets were now freely offered on him, whereas hitherto, 5 to 4 found very few takers. But those who staked their money on him were doomed to be deceived. On the last round it was found that Keraronwe had also more work in him, and was able to defy the utmost efforts of his rival. After the eleventh lap had been made the excitement grew intense, and a great portion of the crowd, ignoring both ropes and police, burst across the course and gained the centre of the field whence they could follow the fortunes of the men as they tore along for the winning post. Up the incline at the last corner Deerfoot gained close on his opponent, but it was only for a moment, as the tape hove her, and by the finest kind of management by her sailing master, until she had rounded the Chester buoy, which she did 2½ minutes ahead of the Dager, the Maggie closely following. On the home-stretch the yachts having the wind free, it was a neck and neck race; first the Dager succeeded in passing the Eggleton, but so close were all three of the boats that it was very difficult for the spectators to tell which had the lead. The Dager and Eggleton were apparently abreast of each other, the Dager to windward, the Maggie still closely pressing both. Upon passing the buoy, however, it was plainly to be seen that the Dager was full half a length ahead. She touched the buoy as she passed, and the Eggleton grazed her at the same time, so close was the pursuit. The Maggie followed shortly after at 5.20 P. M.

AMATEUR RACE AT RAHWAY, N. J.—The Undine Boat Club, a new organization started under the auspices of the most prominent citizens of Rahway, N. J., afforded their friends some pleasant sport a few days since in the way of a well contested double scull race over a course of four miles and a quarter. The contestants were Messrs. T. W. White (champion of the club), and T. E. Garson, Jr., vs. Messrs. Wm. Chamberlain and F. S. Cozzens. As they had been in active training since July 1st great interest was manifested in the result, and the usually quiet little river was in a great state of commotion on the morning of the race. Messrs. White and Garson showed in their fine muscular development and handsome suits the superfluous flesh the great care they had received in training, and their superiority over their opponents in this respect was at once apparent on their taking their places in the boat. They were the favorites from the outset, and the result showed that this confidence had not been misplaced. Their opponents contested the race pluckily from the outset, the stake-boat being turned in 17 min., but, although they kept close company, the superior muscle winning the race was denied them, as Messrs. White and Garson continued to draw away from them stroke by stroke, passing the club house winners by over forty boat lengths, in 34:33. The race was for a cup valued at $250, the gift of the club, and was presented to the winners immediately after the race.

YACHTING IN KINGSTON HARBOR, CANADA.—The race arranged for the 30th ult. was somewhat marred by the prevalence of a high wind and heavy sea, only three boats of the eight entered appearing for the start of the race, which was for a sweepstakes of $50, viz.: the John Power, Phantom and Humming Bird. The start was effected at 11 A. M. from the Grank Trunk Railroad wharf, and was over a thirty mile course, from the harbor to a buoy at Knapp's point, thence up the lake round Simcoe Island, returning by the Batteau channel. The Phantom led at the start, but at Point Frederick the Powers took the lead, which she maintained all through the race, with the Humming Bird second. At Knapp's Point the buoy boat was mismanaged, and the Powers had to delay a short time before she could round it. She, however, kept her lead, and increased it continually from there to Nine Mile Point, a long stretch. She sailed around Simcoe Island, though the sea ran exceedingly high, keeping her crew perfectly soaked. The Humming Bird and Phantom, as they rounded so far to as second place, did not attempt to sail around the island and complete the race, though double reefed, being only half the tonnage of the Powers, and it would have been of no use, for the Powers just darted into view out of the Batteau channel. She came in and won the race with a lead of several miles, and the other boats returned to be objects of curiosity if not of congratulation.

BROOKLYN YACHT CLUB.—A meeting of this club was held on the evening of Aug. 31st, Commodore Geo. W. Kidd, President, in the chair. The chairman introduced Jacob S. Voorhis, the new Commodore, who thanked the members for the honor conferred in electing him to the position, which he stated he would do all that lay in his power to fill in a manner entirely satisfactory. Introductory Overture.

MONDAY, Sept. 5, 1870.

"There is a special providence in the fall of a sparrow," is a quotation more frequently attributed to biblical authority, even by "learned divines," than to its real inventor, Mr. William Shakespeare, to whose fertile pen and vivid imagination we are indebted for many of those beautiful passages which the pastors of some of our first class congregations interweave in their spiritual discourses for the purpose of giving them more weight than they otherwise would possess. We remember one evening, "in the bleak and chill December," we attended Brother Allen's Chapel, as was our wont, or will be, when we can close up to hear "the word" expounded by that good and easy, but really pious and well-intentioned pastor of a lively crowd of followers. And brother Allen, as he took off his overcoat and squared himself for his attack on the book which lay before him, looked the impersonification of a good old colored delver in the spiritual vineyard. And as he surveyed the anxious faces before him, recognizing brother George Alexander Love, sexton of the church, and Deacon Ahrwise over the horse, which he had modestly chosen as a safe place for a social nap, the benign countenance of the lively preacher became lighted up with an inward feeling of happiness and evident delight, and thus he began:—

"My brudders, and you, my beloved sistern, widin de confines of dis yar Bressed book you will find de words of de blessed Lord, which I purpose to lighten your understandin' to-day for dis occasion, from de same de words of my tex, as you shall find by prosein to Old and de New Testament of skriptsial troots and de all-sorwadin fax:—"He tempers de wind to de shorn lambs,"" and thereupon the worthy preacher launched forth in a lengthy discourse, divided and sub-divided into various heads, and when he took his seat, at the close of his sermon, there was an audible hum of approbation and hallelujahs, and general satisfaction at the good things which he in the cause of religion and the bible. And yet the words of brother Allen's text are not to be found within the compass of the bressed book, but originated with Sterne, and may be found in his "Story of Maria." But what all this has to do with amusements of a dramatic character we cannot tell; we have only referred to it to show that Shakespeare and kindred writers do not get that credit which a large portion of our community think their works entitle them to. To us, endeth our first lesson.....

It may be a matter of importance to gentlemen who do at pea-nuts in a first class theatre to learn that the crop this season will be unusually large, and we hasten to break the news to that class of our citizens who are most interested. The pea-nut, pure and simple, is not a very palatable article of food; but roasted, in the shell, it becomes at once a rejuvenator, a stimulator and an incentor. Witness that young person as he sits in the theatre or music hall, munching and crunching away at the all-absorbing peanut. As the dead and gone Mr. Damon said the first Damon and Pythias—now "behold! behold! see! see! behold a scene of more natural glory!" See with what complacency he separates the wheat from the chaff and consumes the rich and succulent kernels with a zest which only a boyhood feels. Gaze upon that poor urchin who has no peanuts. Contrast his melancholy, woe-begone countenance with that of the gentleman who is shelling his way to "realms of eternal bliss." See how his mouth squirms with every motion of the peanut shell; how, with his left hand he delves into the deepest recesses of his trowsers' pocket for the cent which would purchase the necessary quantity of the delicious fruit and mourns because he finds it not." That cent would place him on an equality with his more aristocratic neighbor, and invest the play and all the surroundings with charms the interest they now possess for him; but the cent was lost and void and the hopes of that envious urchin were blasted. Appended we offer a few lines of a poetical cast on the subject of

THE DRAMATIC PEA-NUT.

I love the pea-nut, the pea-nut, the pea-nut,
I love the pea-nut when roasted nice and brown,
Because that the pea-nut, the pea-nut, the pea-nut,
Is just the sort of provender to make bad plays go down.

.....A revolution has just taken place at our boarding house, where resides opera singers, actors, minstrels and, in fact, every walk of theatrical life. You will understand that some of people are pretty heavy eaters—if you ever saw any of them on the lunch route, or at the dinner table of a railway station hotel, you will acknowledge that they paddle their own canoe fast and furious through the good things placed before them. It's the same at our house, which is run on the Canal street plan, first come first served, and no questions asked. We don't have a very elaborate display on landlady's board, but what we do get is good, and attends Rev. Doctor Skinner's church every Sabbath night regular; but the provender is of that staple, solid character which makes good ballast; we all eat on time, and we stick to the banquet as long as there is a groan left in the table; and we are happy, even though no spring chickens or savory clams or tender steaks ever cross the portals of the burial place of things that are boss; we have been running in that groove for years, and the landlady has got us down in an exact style that just squares the circle to a crumb, although "Our Jim" will insist that he leaves the table hungry—but that seems to be his forte; he's always hungry; we've seen him treated to an unadulterated meal at a Broadway restaurant and you know how a chap will eat when another chap pays for it—and immediately afterwards he would complain of the kind of a gnawin' at his stummick." We believe our landlady does not intend to starve her boarders, or create any bad feelings among them, but she avers that her boarders are the most healthy set she ever came across, and she has fed a few in her time; she thinks that other houses must foist all their ravenous and unprofitable boarders on her. And we're all lively, and sing and dance and cut high Dutch generally at our house. The other night a medium priced vocalist paid us a visit, and as an unguarded moment, before the landlady and her genial sock, he innocently remarked that singing and dancing always give people an appetite. That was enough. A glance at the landlady's face convinced us that the envenomed shaft had struck home. Next day, an order was promulgated that owing to the dangerous illness of Mrs. Wellsby, a valuable next door neighbor, all singing and dancing in our house must be prohibited. Do see the object? To destroy or abridge our appetites. We rose against this cruel edict, and made a sort of show of resistance, but as most of us are in arrears, owing to circumstances over which we have no control, she got the best of the struggle, and crestfallen and humiliated, we, like Louis Napoleon and Marshals of France, subsided under such a withering sarcasm. School exercises develop queer things sometimes. We know a certain actor who has a bright, promising eight year old. During the examination at the close of the term, the lad was given certain words from which to form sentences. Two of these were "trickle" and "christmas;" the meaning of the first being to "run," and the latter to "root out." So when the young gentleman's sentences were handed in they read as follows:—"The boy trickled down the stairs;" or "I am looking for the Christmas." The father thinks he has "the coming man" in his family.....Actresses do not have things so rosy as many imagine; they look nice and comfortable on the stage, with the footlights, and many in front envy them their "diamonds" and "emeralds" which glitter on their fingers, breast, "and so forth; but they ain't real; neither is the chicken and fixings that you see on the banquet table to be eaten in the play. We once knew a manager to order in those parts, who, being a great lover of the drama, sat down to a well-spread table with a dozen types of stage beauties at a sixpenny repast. He ordered to serve the roast duck. His knife would not make the slightest impression, and his efforts to amputate "it" and the other things in convulsions of laughter. At last, enraged at his ill success, he cried out to the obliging maid—"Here, you, take away this duck, and bring me another." "Why, sir," said she, "but we were talking about actresses, weren't we? Wait, we're lost track of what we intended to say, but they have a rough row to hoe, at all events.....We will now construct a very pretty piece of composition out of material furnished by the titles of sundry plays invented by the Bard of Avon. And in the first place it is our duty to caution you that the little story is not true, but merely a whim of our own, with no intention of implicating it on you or a friend. Still the story is true. You will please notice, also, the skill with which the several discordant elements are dovetailed together and made to work in harmony and simplicity. This is our

NOVEL SHAKESPEARIAN REVIVAL.

"Two Gentlemen of Verona," got having the fear of Jealous Husbands before their eyes, called forth a "Much Ado About Nothing" between "Romeo and Juliet," who only had one "Night's Dream" of love, and "All's Well That Ends Well" with "Measure for Measure," and called in the aid of "Romeo and Juliet," "Antony and Cleopatra," "Troilus and Cressida," and various other distinguished characters, so with the patronage of "Much Ado" of the actors, they "Merry Wives" of Windsor, in knights and ladies fair, instead of the two who had been the subject of "Twelfth Night," or "What You Will," and "Richard III." and "Hamlet" and "King Lear," who had just dropped into the shades of the "Merchant of Venice," in Chatham at the far-famed locality of the Merchant of Venice, in Chatham street, "You shall never it with your lives," exclaimed the gay gallant of Verona. "As You Like It," was the courageous response of the other. But at this dreadful junction one "Othello" Moor, who had been on a pay star in Jenny Wood with a party of Dukemen, "Twelfth Night" and "Pericles" and yearned for the privilege of taking "Coriolanus" by the nape of the neck and "Timon of Athens" off the heads of the betrayed, but not discouraged ones. The merry wives, however, whose husbands were not to be cast away, laughed the "Love's Labor Lost," one "Othello," who knew "Much Ado About Nothing," and as the Verona compositors had been taught how to "Measure for Measure," and to learn their "All's Well That End's Well." Our task is done, our tale is told, and if, as the far-famed "gentleman of this city" would say, we have afforded you a few moments of pleasure, we shall consider ourselves more than repaid by your kind smiles for the services we have rendered. Price of the UNDERTAKER ten cents.

City Summary.

LINA EDWIN'S THEATRE, located at 720 Broadway, is announced to open for the regular season on Monday evening, Sept. 12th. Since this lady has obtained a lease of these premises the auditorium has nearly been rebuilt, under the direction of Mr. Stanford, who built the French Theatre and directed the alterations subsequently made. The stage has been entirely reconstructed. A solid partition wall of brick at the rear has been removed, and they have been enabled thereby to add some ten feet in depth to the stage and open four large windows in the present rear wall, which will materially aid the ventilation of the building. A new door has been laid to the stage, and as the previous occupants of the building removed all the scenery its place has been supplied by new material; flats, wings, grooves, flies, borders and rigging lofts are all new. The scenery has been painted by Mr. Minard Lewis and Mr. E. S. Fossett, the latter an English importation. The footlights have been re-arranged according to the latest improved pattern, and will be supplied with argand burners; a new stage carpet has been supplied; the proscenium boxes have been re-upholstered in crimson rops and newly carpeted, and rich lace curtains have been added. At the rear of the parquet circle three elegant private boxes of the Parisian pattern, richly upholstered in crimson reps and supplied with comfortable chairs of black walnut and upholstery of the same material as the boxes have been added. They will accommodate four to six persons each and are so constructed that two boxes can be thrown into one. At either end of these boxes is a bronze statue of a chaste pattern supporting a candelabra. Every seat in the house has been taken up and in the re-arrangement some three or four inches more space has been added between the rows, the aisles have all been widened several inches on either side, and a new aisle has been constructed close to the wall on either side, extending the entire length of the auditorium, a much needed improvement. The same comfortable iron seats, of the folding pattern, have been retained, and have been refreshed with fresh white, upholstered in crimson reps, with the numbers in gilt upon a light blue ground. The entire floor is covered with oilcloth and the aisles and passages laid with rich carpeting. All the gas fixtures have been re-bronzed and the walls of the entire auditorium have been elegantly frescoed, and little cherubs are seen peeping at you from almost every direction. In the dress circle the front two rows of seats have been removed, and have been replaced by chairs, and that portion of the house will be known as the balcony circle. In the ceiling overhead, a new dome has been constructed, and elaborately frescoed and around its base a row of gas lights has been placed, which not only serves to aid in illuminating the house, but by creating a current of air assists materially in the ventilation. A large mirror has been placed just above the staircase of the main entrance, and one on either side of the parquet circle in the auditorium. The entrance, which was hitherto an inclined plane of rather steep ascent, has been lowered, and its walls have been tastefully decorated in lavender, blue, white and gold. Two elegant hall chandeliers, aided by a number of side lights in conjunction with a large prismatic sign over the entrance bearing the inscription in colors—Lina Edwin's Theatre—will present a bright and cheery appearance to the passer by. The stock company and attaches of the theatre will consist of the following ladies and gentlemen:—Miss Lina Edwin, lessee and manageress; Harry Jackson, stage manager; John P. Smith, business manager; Harry Pray, treasurer; Fred. Marsden, prompter; J. H. Butler, master carpenter; A. Benedict, properties; J. B. Donniker, leader of orchestra; A. Reed, superintendent of lights; Messrs. Stuart Robson, low and eccentric comedian; Edwin F. Thorne, leading; Eugene Eberle, old men; J. H. Chatterton, tenor singer and walking gentlemen; Harry Josephs, eccentric comedy; J. W. Collins, general business; Charles T. Parsloe, Jr., character business and specialty of street boys; J. H. Brutone, George Jordan, Jr., Horace Nelson, Miss Lena Edwin, Lillie Eldridge, Amelia Harris, Aggie Wood, Dora Herbert, Emma Cline, Alice Atherton, Ella Lewis, Kittie Doud, Annie Lysle, the Sisters Germaine, and an efficient chorus of male and female voices. A new feature will be introduced by the orchestra—whose personal services, by the way, have been entirely secured to this theatre, it being agreed that no substitutes shall be allowed to perform—consisting of their performing as a brass band as well as string. Thus the overture of the evening's performance will be played by the brass band, and the music during the remainder of the evening by the string band. The opening bill will consist of a comedy in three acts by Frederick Phillips entitled "A Bird in the Hand" and the burlesque of "Black Eyed Susan," with Stuart Robson in the character of Captain Crosstree, in which he achieved deserved success when the burlesque was produced about a year since at the Fifth Avenue Theatre by a Boston combination. Entirely new costumes for this burlesque are now being prepared under the personal supervision of Miss Edwin, and are said to be of the richest material and tasteful in design.

THE GRAND ENGLISH OPERA COMBINATION will commence a season of eighteen nights at Niblo's Garden, on October 24th. This company is composed of the principal artists of the late Richings-Parsloe troupe, and the Parepa-Rosa troupe, who are capable of singing some twenty-five operas without repetition, and the troupe is so organized that they will be able to fulfil all original announcements even in the event of the indisposition of one, two or three of the principal artists, which will obviate the hitherto very frequent annoyance of a change of opera on the night of performance. The following is a list of the principal artists:—Mrs. Caroline Richings Bernard and Miss Rose Hersee, prima donnas soprano; Mrs. Zelda Seguin and Mrs. Brookhouse Bowler, prima donnas contralt; Miss Fannie Goodwin, a new candidate for favor upon the operatic stage, who has already achieved success in the concert room, seconda donna soprano; Messrs. Wm. Castle and Brookhouse Bowler, primo tenori; S. C. Campbell, lyric basso; Henri Drayton, dramatic basso; Edwin Seguin, buffo; Albert Lawrence, baritone; Arthur Howell, basso; John Chatterson, seconda tenore; conductor, S. Behrens; operatic directress, Miss Caroline Richings-Bernard; managing directors, C. D. Hess & Co. The following operas comprise the repertoire:—"The Marriage of Figaro," "Don Giovani," "Oberon," "Der Freischutz," "The Huguenots," "Martha," "Il Barbiere," "Rose of Castile," "Bohemian Girl," "Il Trovatore," "Il Travista," "Norma," "Faust," "Crown Diamonds," "La Somnambula," "Maritana," "The Postilion," "The North Star," "Lurline," "Rigoletto," "Dinorah," "The Masked Ball," "Ernani," "Robert la Diable," "Rip Van Winkle," by Bristow, and several other novelties. At the conclusion of their engagement here they intend visiting the principal cities of the Union, and will be accompanied by a large orchestra and a stronger and more efficient chorus than has hitherto accompanied operatic organizations, thus attempting to place English opera upon a firm and solid foundation in this country.

A NATIONAL MUSICAL CONGRESS, whose object is to cultivate the musical taste of the nation, held a three days' session at Steinway Hall, closing on Sept. 1st, when the musical affairs of the United States were thoroughly discussed, a number of papers from eminent musicians being read. On the last day the Congress visited St. George's Church, where the powers of the great organ were fully tested by Mr. George W. Morgan, who performed the overture to "William Tell," and by Mr. R. Schuyler, who played Buck's concert variations on the "Star Spangled Banner." The principal officers elected for the ensuing year were William Mason, of New York, President; Eben Tourjee, of Boston, Mass., Corresponding and Recording Secretary; Henry K. Oliver, of Salem, Mass., Treasurer, and a large number of Vice Presidents, embracing prominent names in the musical profession. The convention adjourned to meet at their next annual session in Boston, Mass.

BELLE RIVERS, claiming to be the wife of Charles Rivers, circus rider, in July last visited Mrs. A. Robinson's dressmaking establishment and representing that she was an actress engaged at the Olympic Theatre in this city, ordered a number of fashionable dresses to be made which she desired finished by Aug. 8th, claiming that she needed them to wear at the theatre on that date, at a full dress rehearsal. Her story was believed, the dresses were made and sent to her boarding house with the bill. She took the goods, and claimed that she had no time then to examine the bill, as she would be late for rehearsal, and thereby forfeit her engagement. She requested the messenger to call the next day, which he did, only to find the lady had fled to Saratoga. On her return to the city Mrs. Robinson had her arrested for defrauding her through false representations, and she gave bail to appear for examination. She is said to be of fine appearance, about 25 years of age, and showily and richly dressed.

THE PROPOSED TESTIMONIAL to Mr. Charles T. Parsloe, a veteran professional, now prostrated upon a bed of sickness in this city, which was to have been in the form of a matinee benefit at one of the principal theatres, we learn has been dispensed with, the committee deciding to solicit contributions and send him the money. Among the contributors last week was Mr. Lawrence Barrett, who gave fifty dollars.

It is a romantic military drama, in five acts and six tableaux, and is an adaptation from the French of M. Dartaignan, by Mr. Samuel Hutchenson, of this city. Mr. Chas. R. Thomas, Jr., created a very favorable impression by his careful performance of Gabriel. His enunciation is clear and distinct, and he has a frank and manly bearing which speedily wins the favor of the audience. Mr. E. Lamb's impersonation of Rampannion was very correct and artistic. Mr. Carroll played the Mercutial fopex with dignity, and his delivery was impressive. Miss Louise Monroe, as Jeanne, was not suited to the line of Pompadour, and should never have been cast for the part. The other characters were well acted, and the play appeared to improve slightly during the week, minor judicious changes being effected from time to time. This evening, September 5th, "Julius Cæsar" is to be presented, with a strong combination of artists. It is the intention on Wednesday to produce "Othello," and on Friday, the occasion of Mr. Barrett's benefit, "London Assurance" will be played, when Mr. John E. Owens and Mrs. F. B. Conway will appear as Mark Meddle and Lady Gay Spanker, in addition to the combination which, besides Mr. Barrett, comprises the names of Messrs. E. L. Davenport, Walter Montgomery, Mark Smith and Miss Virginia Buchanan.

WOOD'S MUSEUM commences its fall and winter season this evening, Sept. 5th, when Mrs. Scott Siddons will commence an engagement, and will appear every evening and Saturday matinee, in Tom Taylor's new historical drama, which is now running at the Queen's Theatre, London, and has reached nearly its two hundredth representation, entitled "Twixt Axe and Crown." The dramatic company which will appear in this play, consists of the following ladies and gentlemen:—Mr. Charles H. Thorne, Jr., Mr. W. H. Whalley, Mr. McKee Rankin, Mr. George Metkiff, Mr. Claude Burroughs, Mr. L. Mestayer, Mr. F. W. Keene, Mr. G. C. Charles, Miss Henrietta Irving, Mrs. Annie Sefton, Miss Alice Logan, Mr. Harry Stewart. At the matinees during the week, save Saturday, a new burlesque extravaganza entitled "The Golden Butterny," will be played, previous to which a farce will be acted, in which two young ladies of this city are to make their first appearance upon any stage. The following company will appear in the burlesque:—Miss Alice Harrison, Miss Theresa Wood, Miss Lillie Hall, Miss Marie Bateria, Miss Annie Firmin, Miss Emma Messmer, Mr. T. W. Keene, Mr. L. J. Mestayer, Mr. G. C. Charles, Mr. James Barnes, Mr. G. M. Manly, Mr. J. Rooney, Mr. Harry Stewart, Mr. John C. Welsh, and Mr. F. Mordaunt.

JOSEPH JEFFERSON continues to play "Rip Van Winkle" at Booth's Theatre, the simple announcement of which is sufficient to crowd this beautiful theatre nightly.

"FRITZ, OUR COUSIN GERMAN," which has been played upwards of sixty nights through the heated term, and has attracted good audiences, will be withdrawn after Sept. 10th, as Mr. Wallack desires possession of the building to renovate it, preparatory to the commencement of the regular fall and winter season. Mrs. Mordaunt has appeared during the week in the role hitherto played by Miss Chambers. Mr. J. K. Emmett will commence his fall and winter tour, which will extend even to San Francisco, Cal., at the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, appearing there in his specialty of "Fritz," two evenings only, on Sept. 13th and 14th.

THE OLYMPIC THEATRE will be opened for the regular fall and winter season on Tuesday, Sept. 13th, a full account of which appeared in our issue of the past week. Mr. J. K. Mortimer has been added to the company.

THE COMIC OPERA of "Little Faust" continues the attraction at the Olympic Theatre.

COL. T. A. BROWN, dramatic agent, 643 Broadway, has several advertisements in another column, to which we refer the managers of the profession.

THE BOWERY THEATRE commenced its regular fall and winter season on Saturday evening, September 3d, with Shakespeare's tragedy of "Macbeth," with Mr. E. T. Stetson, the leading man, in the title role. The play was cast to the entire strength of the dramatic company, which is a good one, and was well played throughout. At the conclusion of the piece Messrs. Stetson and Marsden were called before the curtain, and Mr. Stetson returned his thanks in a brief speech, incidentally mentioning that it was where he now stood, some fourteen years since, he made his first appearance. The performance concluded with the drama entitled the "Snow Bird," with Mr. William Marden in the leading role. The house in the lower portion was comfortably filled, the three other tiers being packed to suffocation.

THE OLD FAVORITES of the company were most enthusiastically welcomed and a cordial reception was extended the new comers. During the combat scene in "Macbeth" the enthusiasm reached its highest point, and the gamins of the gallery, enthused by the war news of the day, designated Macbeth as France and Macduff as Prussia, and throughout the fight cheering ejaculations of "Go in Prussia," "Give it to him, France," issued from a hundred little throats, which the taps of the officer's rattan failed to quell. This evening, September 5th, an entirely original local drama by J. H. Brookworth will be added for the first time, and will be produced with new local scenery, presenting a view of a yacht race, of Jersey Ferry, Long Branch, Bowery and Canal street, Fulton Ferry, etc., entitled "Daring Dick the Detective." N. B. Clarke, for so many years identified with amusements on this side of the town, still remains in charge of the stage. The house has been entirely redecorated throughout; the prevailing colors are white, green and gold. The seats have been entirely upholstered.

KELLY & LEON'S MINSTRELS opened their new hall at No. 806 Broadway on Monday, Aug. 29th, to a house crowded in every part. The auditorium presented a very neat and cheerful appearance and has been fitted up with a deal of taste. The programme for the week has consisted of the usual first part, followed by the "Only Leon" in an act entitled "Follie Dramatique," a bone solo by Dave Wilson very skilfully rendered, the Masters George & Willie Guy in a double hoke and dance entitled "Croquet," and Messrs. Purdy and Meyring appeared as the serialists. The entertainment concluded with the comic opera entitled "Le Petit Faust," in which Edwin Kelly played Dr. Faust and Leon, Marguerite. The company, as at present organized, consists of the following performers:—Leon, Edwin Kelly, Dave Wilson, Master Harry Cawthorne, Lewis Fink, S. S. Purdy, J. B. Carter, J. H. Surridge, George Guy, Masters George and Willie Guy, George Granville, F. Vole and Sam Price. Mr. E. C. Wright is the treasurer and business manager. The large windows in the rear of the hall present a fine drift of water, which is unobstructed during the first part. "Faust" will be continued during the present week and on Sept. 12th a new comic opera entitled "Babies of the Period" will be produced. During the entire past week the houses have been filled nightly.

AT THE THEATRE COMIQUE, Wyndham Clark, a Scottish tenor, appeared during the past week and achieved a success, his voice being pure and sweet in tone, of high cultivation, but lacks a little in strength. His selections were not quite as popular as they might have been to please an American audience. On Saturday evening, in response to a well deserved encore, he led forward a young lady whose name did not appear on the bills, who sang with him a duet, with good effect. The lady will appear during the present week, although not announced upon the bills. Messrs. Pankhurst and Collins have appeared in the "Original Saine Old Dance," in which they display great agility of execution and admirable time. They also gave a double song and dance called "Moonlight at Cape May." Among the old favorites at this house, the great ventriloquist, Jester, has appeared nightly. The ballet at this house is deserving of especial commendation. The new attractions, for the present week, consist of Mlle Giovanna Mazzeri, premiere danseuse, late a principal feature of the Berlenchi ballet troupe, and James P. Wambold, a balloist and negro comedian of celebrity. Miss Emma Grattan, who appeared at Niblo's during the run of the "White Fawn," who possesses a finely rounded form, pretty face, and is a vocalist and burlesque actress of more than ordinary merit, is under engagement to shortly appear here. Wyndham Clark, Pankhurst and Collins, Jester, Ryman, Stewart, Barney, Coes and Benedict, will continue this week.

HENRY JOHN WALLACK, a veteran actor, died in this city on Tuesday, Aug. 30th, aged 78 years. He was a brother of the late Mr. J. W. Wallack, manager of Wallack's Theatre, and the father of J. W. Wallack, Jr. For some time he acted at the Old Park Theatre in this city, and passed many years of his life in England. Some fourteen years since he again visited this country and located in Boston, where he became the stage manager of the Howard Athenæum, then under the management of Jacob Harrow. He was buried on Friday, Sept. 2d, from the late residence of Mr. Lester Wallack.

MISS GLYN—Mrs. E. S. Dallas—a reader and actress of note, sailed for this city on the steamer Russia from Liverpool, Eng., on Aug. 27th.

Dramatic.

THE CHAPMAN-BISHOP BURLESQUE TROUPE, at the Holliday Street Theatre, Baltimore, opened the second and concluding week of their engagement at the above house on Monday, August 29th., concerning which our correspondent, "Don Juan," writes under date of Sept. 2d, as follows:—"The burlesque of 'Kenilworth' was produced with Blanche Chapman in the role of the Earl of Leicester, and Ella in that of Amy Robsart; C. B. Bishop impersonated the character of Virgin Queen Bess a la Ristori, Harry Hotto that of Varney, Joe Parker appeared as 'hard up' Smith, Jennie Gilmer as Sir Walter Raleigh, Geo. Howard as the colonial Tressilian, W. H. Burton as Earl of Sussex, and Master M. Glenn as Janet. The performance commenced with the domestic comedy of the 'Quiet Family' with Blanche Parker, Mrs. H. F. Grattan, and Misses Viola Plunkett and Jenny Gilmer in the cast. The very comical situation and incidents of the comedy were greatly enjoyed by the audience. In the burlesque, Wallace and Wood, the musical clowns, did their feat of performing upon several instruments at the same time, and in the management and circus exhibition before her royal highness, a baby—imitation—elephant was introduced. Jeff Hotto appeared in his great bare back act upon a fast trotting mule and horse. The Sisters Chapman executed several songs and dances, and their choruses were excellently well rendered. 'Kenilworth' was played three nights, also on Thursday, 'Cinderella' was presented, with Blanche Chapman as the persecuted 'Cinderella,' Ella Chapman as Dandini, C. B. Bishop as the pushing Georinda. The performances began with the comic military drama, 'The Post of Honor,' Friday evening, for the benefit of C. B. Bishop, the operatic burlesque of 'Fra Diavolo' and the farce of 'Wanted One Thousand Young Milliners.' The Chapman-Bishop Combination, during the first week of their engagement, did well, opening to a crowded house, but I am sorry to report the direct reverse in connection with their second and closing week. P.S.—The following is a complete list of the stock company attached to the Holliday Street Theatre for the coming season:—Blanche Chapman, Harry Hudson, Wm. M. Ward, Harry Rogers, C. B. Bishop, George Lemock, W. H. Hackett, Gerard Howard, G. J. Lawrence, W. H. Burton, C. A. Hawthorne, Geo. Oser, C. E. Rand, H. Edmunds, Frederick H. Lashley, Louise Hawthorne, Lily Wiling Davenport, Viola Plunkett, Fanny Heath, Jennie Gilmer, Miss Hussey, Maggie Dean, Mrs. W. H. Grattan, Mrs. Harry Hudson, Mrs. Stockman, Mrs. Grainger, Harry Rogers, Master Holden and Anderson. On Sept. 5th, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Watling will commence a brief star engagement, opening in "Trodden Down; or, Under Two Flags."

ON BUSTON THEATRICALS our correspondent, "Gotham," writing under date of Sept. 3d, says:—"A large audience was present on Monday, Aug. 29th, to witness the opening of the Adelphi under its new management. Every seat in the house was occupied, and many were turned away. The performance opened with the old 'Too Much for Good Nature,' under a new name—with Leonard Grosvill as Simeon Jaffier Jenkins. The performance was rather funny, and his support was only fair. Bennie Wilmore was good enough as Matilda Jane, and Mrs. Farren did well as Mr. Chummy. A. M. Kennedy as Adophus, and Welsh Edwards as Mr. Footle, were good representatives of their prominent parts. Of the drama, suffice it to say that the farce came first the least said the better. After the farce came 'Blue Beard,' an English version of 'Barbe Bleue,' but unfortunately without the wit and sparkle of the original. The only really remarkable piece of acting in this was given by Jennie Worrell, as Boulotte, who looked prettily, sang capitally and acted admirably. Her sister Sophie, as Blue Beard, was not nearly as good, being too much conscious. Jennie Wilmore was fair only as Princess Eveva and Johanna being the principals. The scenery is quite good, but the music proved too much for some of the singers. The waltz between the sexes were terribly long. The bill has pleased the public, and enormous crowds have been present.....The Museum presented the first novelty of the season on Monday last, in the shape of Tom Taylor's new comedy of 'New Men and Old Acres.' It was magnificently mounted and finely cast, but it has not succeeded, as this afternoon is its last performance. Apart from its being a new play, the performance of Monday evening was interesting by reason of two first appearances—of Emily Mestayer and Harry Crisp. Miss Mestayer is an old favorite here, but has not played in Boston for three years. During her absence she has lost nothing of her old excellence, and her performance of Lady Mildred Vavasour has been most admirable. Harry Crisp, too, was warmly greeted on his first appearance, especially as he has been dangerously ill. In Bertie Fitzwise he had a part most suitable to his talent. Warren made the most of Mr. Bunter, and Barron as Mr. Brown was really excellent, acting with taste and judgment. Hardenberg was not very successful as Blazenbaig, the Dutch dialect being too much for him. McClannin was good as Marmaduke Vavasour, acting quietly and pleasantly. Annie Clarke, though suffering from a severe cold, made the best of Lilian Vavasour, and Mrs. Vincent, as Mrs. Bunter, was in her element, acting most humorously. Laura Phillips had not much opportunity to act in Fanny Bunter, but she showed great merit in doing as well as she did. We are promised soon the production of 'Fernande,' by Marie Seebach, the Chapman Sisters, the Fox and Denier Troupe, Harry Beckett

B. Leslie, Ethiopian comedian; Katie Simmons, song and dance; Jennie Wood, dancer; Miss Hall, soubrette; Miss Wood, dancer; Miss Morton, vocalist; Harry Coleman, vocalist and dancer; Miss Perkins, pantomimist; La Belle Nelson, dancer, and others.

Waddleton, May Robinson, Jenny Gilmor, Agnes Robinson, Kate O'Neil, Mr. Delvil Ryan and others will appear in the burlesque. Mr. Beamer's intention is to make the Academy of Music a first class place of amusement, the performances consisting of burlesque, farce, comedy and minstrelsy, where ladies and families can attend with the assurance that they will be entertained and amused in an unexceptionable manner.

WARREN BOADWELL'S OPERA HOUSE COMBINATION commences a series of entertainments at the Michigan fairs at Lansing on Sept. 14th.

CINCINNATI, O., VARIETY NEWS is detailed by our regular correspondent, dating the 2d, as follows:—"Business is steadily picking up at the different halls. At the Alhambra Charley Sullivan and Minnie Clark withdrew on Thursday and departed for Nashville, accompanied by Annie Florence, the jig-st. Sullivan was replaced on the end by Charley Young, late of the Academy of Music. Young does a tolerable song and dance. Minnie Warner, balladist, who is also a pretty girl, appeared this week, together with Jeff Howard, song and dance man. Tom Adams, comedian, and May Clifton, balladist, who have been touring among the Kentucky fairs, are to open on Monday.....At the Race Street Theatre Mr. Dewsay Weaver, an excellent comedian, has replaced Miller on one end, Frank Bennett taking the other, and Ben Maginnis acting as interlocutor. Maud De Lisle, Lotta May, and Belle Gerd—each excellent vocalists—were added to the company on Monday. Frank Bennett, who is a very good song and dancer, took a decidedly new step yesterday, by entering into the matrimonial state with Miss Maude Fay, of the Academy. A number of the profession have married very often, Mr. B. was applied to the Police Court for a license, but was directed thence to the Probate Court. At this last place it transpired that he was an infant—not twenty-one by several months—and so he had to get Uncle John Gray, the door-keeper at the Race Street Theatre, to stand bail before he obtained the coveted permit. Frank is a handsome little fellow, and the writer regrets that he will know them what an infant is before he has been a married man long. Last night (Thursday) Minnie Baker, an excellent song and dance girl—particularly in the dancing—was added to the company.....The Academy of Music flourishes tolerably well, with the company reported last week. Nellie Anderson is a great favorite there."

JOHNNY PEAKES, of minstrel renown, seems to have got himself into trouble in Cincinnati, having been arrested on the charge of being in the possession of a diamond pin, the property of Gen. R. Smith, of Kansas City. Upon the surrender of the pin, Mr. Smith had Peakes released from custody. We have a letter from Mr. Smith on the subject, and intend addressing Peakes through the columns of this paper, requesting information desired in the case. Surrender was third party, we believe, with Arlington's Minstrels.

FOREIGN SHOW NEWS.

Dramatic.

OF LONDON, ENG., THEATRICALS, our advices are up to Augs 31st, which include the most part the dullest of the entire year, and it has been characterized by no dramatic novelty. Of the west end theatres only five remain open, the Haymarket, Queen's, Olympic, Lyceum and Sanford and Charley's, the programme of each of which, with the attraction altered progressively, is sufficient interest to charm the play-goers who remain in town, and has the charm of novelty to the provincial visitors who are now making holiday, the harvest time being over. The Gaiety Theatre is announced to commence its regular season on Aug. 29th, with a partially reconstructed company, including Miss Nellie Farren, and the new burlesque by Dance and Camellek," in which M'lle Emma Carie, H. Charles Carle, from Kibbo's Garden, N. Y., and a corps de ballet will appear, to be followed by Planche's comic drama, entitled "Peter Parley's Tour," or "Love's Telegraph," Mr. Harris, a celebrated Anglo-Dutch comedian from the principal theatres of America," will make his first appearance in England. He will be supported by Miss Fortescue and Miss Maria Harris, to be followed by Lecoque's opera bouffe, "Giroflé Girofla," in which Miss Kate Santley, Miss Marie Leoclo, Messrs. W. H. Cummings, Aynsley Cook and J. D. Stoyle, will make their first appearance at this theatre. To conclude with Offenbach's musical extravaganza called "Orpheus in the Lower Regions." At the Strand Messrs. E. Terry and J. D. Stoyle will appear, supported by chorus girls. A. Maclean and J. D. Stoyle will appear, supported by chorus and ballet. The musical directors are Herr Meyer Lutz and Mr. F. Stanislaus. Mr. Phillips has resigned the lessee and manager-ship of the Royalty, in favor of Mr. Lionel Brough, who will open it on Sept. 10th, with a new burlesque, entitled "Ixion; or, The Man at the Wheel," by Mr. Reece, author of "Cinderella." The Royalty will be re-decorated and refurnished, and will be known as the Folly Theatre, under the management of Miss Henrietta Hodson. Mr. Liston has introduced "Punkee" into the pantomime bouse of the Olympic, which is more than ever crowded nightly. At the Queen's Mr. Frank Matthews will appear in the new drama, entitled "Lights and Shadows of Manchester Life." The drama was undoubtedly suggested by Charles Reade's story, "It Is Never Too Late to Mend." The Princess's will open on Sept. 10th, with the sensational drama, entitled "Foul Play," by Messrs. Boucicault and Reade. The Surrey will open on Sept. 5th, with a new drama, entitled "Lost in London," by Messrs. Sims and Pettitt, in which Mr. Shepherd will appear, supported by the following cast of characters:—Messrs. Shepherd, Vincent, Wilmot, Wilde, Wenden, Nation, Miss Lydia Foote, Miss Fanny Josephs, Miss Lizzie Coote, Miss Lizzie Wenden, Miss Nation, Miss Fanny Wenden, Miss Lizzie Wilmot, Miss Wilde and Miss Emily Wilmot. The scene opens before the factory of Chadleigh & Co., engineers, where Ned Burley, a discharged and unscrupulous workman, jealous of Tom Chadleigh, the son of the head of the firm, who is a favorite with the foreman, Mr. Dodge, endeavors to strike for higher wages. Chadleigh is, however unwilling to meet their views, and about one half the men side with Burley, while the remainder follow Manton, and keep the works going. Burley, who is a Fenian, is determined to ruin Chadleigh, and for that purpose has induced Wilde Wonder, Nation's friend, learning that Burley is locked out of the works, and knowing his dishonorable character, determines to make employment for him. Burley and Wilde meet at the "Cock and Bottle," disguised as workmen, and in the course of their drunken battle take place scenes of the most sensational character, which, when the factory, containing gunpowder, rings the factory bell and calls for work. He is at once suspected, quits of the house and is followed by Burley and his confederates, and the most exciting battle takes place outside the factory, the end of the fight and the men on strike giving the signal for the steam engine from his cart, which is set on fire. Burley escapes with the explosion, but is afterwards captured by the police, and discharges the works and the workmen. Wilde Wonder, Nation's friend, learning that Burley would have opposed the consummation of his disgraceful scheme, but that Wilde Wonder has been ostensibly upon the watch and at most dangerous hours of the night, determines to make a sacrifice of himself for the benefit of his friend, and succeeds in getting Burley to meet him at the "Cock and Bottle," where he has been told Wilde Wonder has been seen. Burley and Wilde meet, and there follows a most exciting scene, in which Wilde Wonder is overpowered, and Burley would have secured the consummation of his diabolical
